

Portland wheat market tour includes 30 from area

About 30 persons are expected to attend the Morrow County Wheat Growers

"Wheat Marketing Tour" in Portland today and tomorrow. The group left Heppner this morning at 7:30 on a Morrow County School District bus. Cost of use of the bus was $15 a person.

The tour group will meet on the River Queen for lunch at noon and visit a grain handling facility at 2 this afternoon. The wheat growers will then tour Terminal No. 6, container shipments, at 4 and participate in wine tasting at 6 p.m.

at the Oak Knoll Winery. Dinner will be at a Chinese Restaurant.

Wheat Growers will stay at the Imperial Hotel tonight. Rooms are expected to cost $25 for a double and $20 for a single.

Tomorrow, the group begins the day at 9:30 a.m. with Jar

Gilleland explaining Commodity Futures Trading. At 11:15, the Portland Grain Exchange will explain the cash grain market. At noon, the tour group will attend a luncheon with the agricultural committee from the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

At 1:30 p.m., the group will tour a bakery and then begin the trip back to Heppner at 3, arriving at about 8 p.m.

'Tell the facts' on beef

The Oregon Cow Belles have procured Gov. Vic Atiyeh's support of a national Cow Belle resolution which demands the federal government disseminate nutrition information based only on "scientific fact." Polly Owen, Eugene, Oregon Cow Belles president, says the governor's support is the first step in insuring that consumers are told all the facts as to the contributions red meat makes to a balanced diet. The resolution also asks that Federal funds spent on nutrition research be allocated so that all sides of the diet-heart disease issue are investigated.

challenging the theory that cholesterol and saturated fats in the diet cause heart disease. Also red meats contribute a complete protein plus the most absorbable source of iron, trace minerals and important B vitamins. This coupled with the fact that cattle play an integral part in the world food supply scheme makes beef production a very important segment of American agriculture, she said.

Farmers for Smith

Harvey Keudell of Stayton and Glen Hudspeth of Prineville have been named as co-chairmen of the Farmers for Denny Smith organization by Congressional nominee Denny Smith.

Hudspeth, a Crook County cattle rancher, raises breeding stock on his family farm near Prineville.

Weather slows some harvests

The first Farm Labor Information bulletin of the season, issued by the State Employment Division last Thursday, reports that adverse weather conditions in some parts of the state have slowed pre-harvest activities. However, weather conditions are improving, and the strawberry harvest in the Willamette Valley is being favorably affected. Areas experiencing the Mt. St. Helens ash fallout have reported no crop damage at this time.

Ranchers may boost cow-calf production

Eastern Oregon ranchers may be able to boost profits by tying their cow-calf production systems more closely to market conditions, two Oregon State University researchers have learned in a computer study.

"We found that, over an 11-year period, keeping yearlings (calves in their second year) through the summer and selling in August increased the net farm income for a 300-head herd by 79 percent, from $218,292 to $391,646," said Carol Whitley, a graduate student who conducted the research under the supervision of Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station economist Carl O'Connor.

The key to higher profits, explained O'Connor, was paying close attention to the weight-times-price formula used to calculate a calf's value, and to partially predictable fluctuations in the price of feed and cattle cycles.

During periods when supplies at the marketplace were dwindling, and prices were rising, it became profitable to hold yearlings and fatten them on summer pastures (rather than selling them in the spring as some ranchers do), he said.

When supplies were increasing, and prices were decreasing, losses could be minimized by switching production systems and selling calves when they were weaned in September (at about four to six months of age).

The researchers used data collected through OSU's Eastern Oregon Agricultural Research Center at Burns to simulate in the computer the operation of a "typical" eastern Oregon cow-calf production ranch.

They examined business during the 11-year period from 1968 through 1978 because it represented common cattle cycle, said Whitley.

She said ranchers in eastern Oregon usually use one of three production systems: -The cow-calf system-calves are sold at weaning time in September.

-The cow-yearling system-calves are held through winter and sold in the spring.

-The cow-long yearling system-calves are kept through their second summer and sold in August.

Artquake applications available

The fourth annual "Artquake". Portland's downtown celebration of the arts will take place Sept. 5, 6, and 7. Applications are now available for artists, craftspeople, dancers, actors, musicians, writers and filmmakers. Applications for all programs may be obtained at the ARTQUAKE office, The Galleria, 921 S.W. Morrison, Suite 404, or by calling 227-ARTS.

Drivers license hours revised

The Heppner office of the Motor Vehicles Division will be open 5 days a week as usual until June 16, said Gene Murty, the license examiner in charge.

From June 16 to the end of the month, Lou Voytko, manager of the Hermiston office, will open on Tuesdays and Thursdays. He will also do business in Condon June 18.

For answers to any questions, phone 678-5165, or 567-3804. A taped message at the Heppner number reviews the dates of closure, and a calendar will hang in the door of the office, Murty said.

Book reading program set

Oregon students who read ten or more books this summer will earn a reading certificate signed by Gov. Vic Atiyeh and State School Supt. Verne A. Duncan.

This is the fourth year of the program introduced by Duncan. More than 13,000 students have received certificates.

"We are convinced that this is an excellent program that encourages our young people to continue to build reading skills during the summer months," Duncan said.

Students must finish the books by Sept. 15 and send a letter which includes their name, age, return address, signature of parent or guardian, and titles of books to Verne Duncan, state superintendent of schools, Salem, Ore. 97310.
