The Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) is in operation for its fifth year at Camp Tupper. The Tupper YCC offers an opportunity for youth, 15-18 years old, from all parts of Oregon to contribute to preserving and maintaining the natural resources in the local Umatilla National Forest.

YCC is an integral work-recreation-learning program. Environmental awareness activities are a part of a daily work routine that help develop an understanding of the need for the work project and its impact on the environment. Recreational activities are also a necessity, lending meaning to the YCC motto "Hard Work and Good Times." Weekend trips, such as backpacking and river rafting were highlights of this summer's activities.

The 20 enrollees and seven staff have contributed to the development and maintenance of Bull Prairie and Penland Lake recreation areas in the forest. Fire ring installation, painting, traffic barrier installation and boat dock construction are some of the projects that they completed to benefit visitors to these areas.

Other projects in the local forest in the U.S. Forest Service Heppner, Ukiah and Dale Ranger Districts have been wildlife habitat improvement, trail construction, tree thinning and transplanting, clearing firewood access areas and barbed-wire fence roll-up and construction.

The staff at Tupper is made up of four crew leaders, Scott Edgerton, Bob Case, Stephanie Lewis and Laura Brusven, Environmental Awareness Coordinator Dino DeSimone, Food Manager, Julie Roth, and Linda Jalbert, director.
