Residents of Heppner and the surrounding area are advised not to get worried if it should sound as though war has been declared about 7 o'clock tonight (Thursday). It will just be a pep rally and noise parade heralding Friday night's Heppner-Burns football game.

The Chamber of Commerce has challenged the high school students to a contest to see who could make the most noise at the rally which will start at 7 o'clock largely in downtown Heppner.

A crowd of nearly 200 persons attended the annual Heppner Parent-Teachers Association (PTA) teachers' reception Tuesday evening at the Heppner Legion Hall. It was held under the direction of Lowell Gribble, new PTA president. Mrs. Mary Van Stevens, mayor of Heppner, extended a welcome to the new teachers.

Irvin Rauch of Lexington was named new president of the Morrow County Farm Bureau on Tuesday night at the monthly meeting of the organization held at Willows Grange at Ione. He succeeds Newt O'Harra who has served for the past two years.

Alumax site wins Environmental Protection Agency approval, according to north-west regional administrator Clifford V. Smith. Construction of the $350 million aluminum plant will take place near Umatilla, Oregon.

The Oregon Transportation Commission has approved street improvements totaling $187,016 for 12 small Oregon cities. At Heppner, the old, narrow Morgan Street Bridge will be replaced. It has been closed by a load limit due to extreme wear and stress. Estimated cost to replace the bridge is $75,600.

"Prospects for the coming deer season are unpredictable," said Glen Ward, game biologist for the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission, speaking before the Chamber of Commerce. "Because of the short seven-day season, which opens Oct. 4, we don't know what to expect. We don't know if the short season will bring more hunters, or if the Portland hunters will decide against making the trip to Heppner this year."

Ullman's clout vital to Oregon

Willingness to sail against the wind should be looked upon as a political virtue. But it has threatened to swamp Al Ullman, Oregon's Democratic congressman from the Second District who is in a tough race against an untried and untested Republican opponent, Denny Smith.

The wind that Ullman turned into was the value-added tax, a device like a hidden sales tax that many leaders in Congress have seriously considered as a way to find funds to reduce the Social Security burdens, certain to grow worse in the years ahead, and as a responsible way to reduce the income tax without cutting national security needs or making inflation worse.

The Oregonian has been skeptical of the tax, feeling there is no practical way to guarantee that it always will be used to offset the other taxes. While we trust Ullman to do what he says he will, the same confidence is not lodged in future members of Congress.

Ullman has dropped the tax plan, declaring, "As far as I am concerned, that issue (VAT) is dead." He said the value-added tax in "not acceptable to the country or to Oregon."

Had Ullman not searched for a means of bolstering Social Security, he would be in a lot less political trouble. A flaming liberal, Steve Anderson, a Salem lawyer, pushed the veteran congressman hard in the Democratic primary, getting 45 percent of the vote to Ullman's 55 percent.

But it is hard to imagine large numbers of these voters shifting to Denny Smith, who at age 42 is more conservative than some politicians become at the age of four score and 10. Smith has no experience in public service, local, state or national.

The kind of clout that Ullman commands as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee is the envy of the other 49 states. Only Washington can match it, in the Senate side with Senators Henry Jackson and Warren Magnuson.

Since Ullman, long a fiscal protegee of Rep. Wilbur Mills, succeeded to the Mills post in 1974, he has been in the forefront of efforts to balance the budget, reform the income tax and otherwise bring greater fiscal conservatism to the nation's tax system. His record would look better if he didn't cooperate so much. He has voted for spending bills certain to pass in order to win their sponsor's aid for his own projects, most of them vital to his district of Eastern Oregon and a portion of the Willamette Valley.

Smith has not made many proposals he would have any chance of getting approved if he were elected, whereas Ullman would continue to fight as a national leader for a sound Social Security System, aid for Oregon's lumber and cattle industries and continued efforts to support recreational and wildlife areas, such as Hells Canyon and the Minam Wilderness, while looking after countless small services that only a congressman with real influence can perform for the citizens of Oregon.

One of the most effective Oregon congressmen in modern times, Wendell Wyatt, a Republican, has endorsed Al Ullman. Wyatt understands the importance of seniority in Congress and knows firsthand of its great value to the state. Voters should take Wyatt's advice. The Oregonian recommends they vote for Rep. Al Ullman.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A nostalgic day

To the Editor: We have just returned home after attending the reunion of the classes of 1907 - 38 of Ione High School and would like to express, through your paper, if possible, our sincere thanks to the members of the committee who arranged the affair.

It was a marvelously nostalgic day for my husband, who was the former student, but I, an outsider, was welcomed just as warmly.

Births

Christine Marie Kenny - A daughter, Christine Marie, was born to Linda and Joseph Patrick Kenny, Heppner, on Sept. 24, 1980, at Pioneer Memorial Hospital in Heppner. Christine weighed 6 lbs., 14 1/2 oz.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kenny, Heppner; Mrs. Lorraine Johnson, Portland; and Mr. Harry Fielor, Sandy, Ore.

Great-grandparents are Mrs. Rose Mahoney, Baker, and Mrs. Julia Latimer, Sandy.

We were privileged to spend a few days at the home of Louise and Bruce Keene and that for us, is always a joy.

Many, many thanks, dear people - it is a day we shall never forget!
