

Dianna's This&That closing

Dianna's This & That will be closing its doors permanently Saturday, March 7, after a final sale from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The shop opened in May, 1979, and has been operating on an intermittent schedule since September of last year when the Fifehills moved to Pendleton.

Ken Fifehills, who operated a construction business in the Heppner area, is now co-owner of a storm window business in Pendleton and Dianna is employed with K-Mart.

Ione High students chosen for OSU program

Ione High School students, Shawn LaRue, Richard Ladd and Diann Morter and teacher Darrel Wilson will participate March 12-14 in the 12th annual Oregon Junior Science and Humanities Symposium sponsored by Oregon State University.

A total of 150 top high school students in science and humanities fields and 50 teachers from high schools across the state have been selected to participate in the 1981 symposium. Theme this year is, "The Shape of the Future: Choices and Limits."

A $10,000 grant from the Academy of Applied Science, Boston, helps pay symposium expenses and provides room-board for the selected students and teachers.

The Oregon conference is one of 30 to be conducted in 1981 across the country. Thomas P. Evans, chairman of the department of science education, has directed the OSU program since its establishment in the Northwest as part of the national effort. Coordinator this year is Margaret L. Moore, assistant professor of science education.

The symposium format calls for keynote talks by OSU professors and a guest lecturer, Albert Bartlett, University of Colorado physics professor. Then students discuss choices and limits presented by the speakers. Earlier conferences have focused on energy shortages and alternatives, the environmental crisis, and the challenge of change in America.

The U.S. Army Research Office is a cooperating agency in the Junior Science and Humanities program. Evans noted. A national symposium for representatives from the various state conferences will be held in April at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point.

Wind reignites blaze at Graham storage shed

Heppner Volunteer Firemen received a call around 2:30 on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 28, that a storage shed at the residence of Claude Graham, Heppner, had caught on fire. The fire was under control in a half hour, said Fire Chief Forrest Burkenbine, and the fire crew left, only to be called back again around 4:30 p.m. because the wind had fanned the flames and reignited the blaze.

Burkenbine said that three fire department vehicles were used in combating the fire.

Lou McIntosh shows Yard of Month project winner

The first yard honored in the lone Garden Club Yard of the Month project has been chosen as a "good example of mobile home landscaping," said club member Delta Huber.

The yard of Clarence and Lou McIntosh, 3rd and 'E' streets, Ione, "featured a wide variety of plant materials, was well arranged and immaculately groomed."

"The judges found many beautiful yards which will probably be featured in future months," added Mrs. Huber.

A sign has been posted at the McIntosh yard and people are invited to drive by to view the yard.

Esther Eastwood to present Gospel concert

Esther Eastwood, who travels on tour, singing and speaking to church groups about her change from practice of the occult or Eastern religions to a new Christian experience, will be in Heppner at the Heppner Grade School on Wednesday, March 11 at 7:30 p.m.

Miss Eastwood "no longer dwells upon the occult or Eastern religions which she once practiced. She has returned to the faith of her early training. Esther shares the struggles of her single life and how she discovered power in total surrender. She is spontaneous and honest. Her mannerisms and humor are always fresh and exciting," said a Church of the Nazarene new release.

Miss Eastwood's Gospel concert will "bring something special to Heppner," added Church of the Nazarene Pastor Floyd Wilks, "a strong message for parents and youth. We encourage the community to attend."

Supporting and encouraging attendance at the concert, besides Pastor Wilks, are Pastor Doug Thomas of the Christian Life Center, and Pastor Bigelow of the Baptist Church in Heppner.

Esther Eastwood

Pastor Wilks says that all donations will be towards paying Miss Eastwood's expenses and that tapes and records will be sold to help support her work and travel expenses.

The Cubs also toured the Democrat Gulch school, and the Heppner City Library and Museum.

Several of the Cubs also set up tables for the Elk's Annual. Mrs. Angell says that both Den 1 and Den 4 have lost boys to Webelos and from now on the two dens will be combined.

The Oregon Wheat League sponsored a "Marketing and Energy" tour last week to Portland and the surrounding area. The bus left Boardman at 9 a.m., going to the coal fire plant which the group toured, all coming away with a sample of coal, used there.

Bus Clough of Arlington was the tour guide and coordinator, assisted by Darrell Maxwell. They traveled down the river, crossing at Biggs to view the BPA wind turbines at the Goodnoe Hills.

Lunch was at Goldendale, and then on to an interesting and educational tour of the Bonneville Dam. Here the group was briefed on the plans for the enlargement of locks there for the barge traffic. The estimated amount of grains to be going through the locks in 1990 was 4,784 tons but in 1980 the amount was 5,356 tons exceeding somewhat the planned-for increase. Several plans have been considered for the enlargement, but there is nothing definite at this time. There are several other dams on the rivers of Columbia and Snake which are large enough to accommodate the traffic but the problem at Bonneville causes a bottleneck.

The group arrived at the Imperial Hotel and were on their own on Tuesday evening. Wednesday started with a breakfast with Paul Green of the U.S. Wheat Association speaking to the group, and orientation with Dane Lauderback of NPGG. Group members spent the morning attending the marketing rooms, seeing wheat and other grains bought and sold, and then went on to Benihana for lunch.

The ports of Portland and other points of interest were enjoyed during the afternoon. In the evening there was a hockey game between the Winterhawks and a Canadian team from central Canada. The Winterhawks were victorious.

Thursday morning found the group ready for the trip to Kalama, Washington, to visit the plant there and watch the loading of grains on the larger ships. Lunch was enjoyed on the way home. The group visited the Carnation Chick Farm at Rufus, at the former Alan Tomm farm. Here the group saw several thousand chickens and heard a bit about the production of this plant, market-wise and expense-wise, and then it was on home.

Those locally enjoying this trip were Mr. and Mrs. Don Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Peck of Heppner, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Crawford and Jim Swanson of Ione, and Mr. and Mrs. C.C. Jones of Lexington.

Perhaps it would be a good idea if more organizations had these educational trips, in order to bring the people up to date on the many phases of the organizations, especially how they are financed, and the good things that come to the people who are part of these groups.

The Lexington Grange motored to Ione on Sunday to watch their newly-elected members receive the degrees in the grange. Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Papineau and son, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Peck, Mr. and Mrs. C.C. Jones, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Smouse. Those enjoying the initiation work given by Dot Halvorsen and team were the newly elected members of Lexington Grange, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buchanan, and Mrs. Barbara Smith and son. A lovely dinner was served at 6 p.m. by the ladies of Willow Grange.

Millie Yocum of Heppner stayed at the C.C. Jones ranch while they were gone from home a couple of days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Papineau have gone to Kennewick, Washington, for several weeks, taking their horses to the Sundown race track there. Berl Stillman and Dennis Papineau spent Saturday at Bride Creek flats at the game reserve to observe the deer and elk. Mr. Stillman is a wildlife biologist.

Dale Wilson was taken to Pioneer Memorial Hospital on Saturday where he received medical attention from injuries received from a dog bite.

Candy Tracy and Lori Ruhl of Hermiston were weekend visitors with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L.E. Ruhl.

Jim Lund has started a new business in Lexington of garden and yard work, preparing the ground for seeding and weed control with rototilling. Anyone interested can contact him at his home.

Earl Miller visited a friend, Mel Melby at the veteran's hospital in Walla Walla one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Papineau entertained with a skating and sleighing party at their mountain cabin on Sunday. After a lovely dinner the adults enjoyed an afternoon of pinocle while the younger people played in the snow. Those present besides the host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Frankie Robinson and children and Mr. and Mrs. Mick Sharp and children.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Yocum had all their family home for dinner on Sunday except their son, Jack, who is stationed in Germany with the U.S. Army. Present were Mrs. Debbie Jones and daughter, Marie Yocum of Pendleton, Millie Yocum of Heppner and Mike Davidson of Pendleton.

Annetta Klinger entertained Joyce Buchanan and Delpha Jones with a delightful lunch at her home on Monday. In the afternoon the ladies spent the time sewing and exchanging recipes.

Eastern Star holds meeting Feb. 9

Ruth Locust Chapter No. 32, Order of the Eastern Star held a regularly stated meeting the evening of Feb. 9, with Worthy Matron Louise Wood and Worthy Patron John Wood presiding.

In spite of the coldest evening of the season, a good-sized group ventured forth to honor the Masons with a delicious potluck dinner which preceded the meeting. The diningroom tables were attractively decorated by Anna Graham, Lota Tibbles and Beth Bryant, using candles, napkins and place-mats in red and white; the serving tables carried along the Valentine theme.

The after dinner program for the Masons, their wives and Eastern Star members and their husbands was held in the main lodge room. It opened with a brief history of Masonry which goes back into Biblical times. Then Virginia Wilkinson and Susie Cooper presented an amusing and informative dialogue which told more about the Masons. Frances Smouse entertained with violin numbers appropriate to February.

Out of town visitors, Mr. and Mrs. John Clouston from Portland, were heartily welcomed. All county members are being urged to attend the next meeting on Monday evening, March 9, when plans will be formulated for the Friendship Night that is scheduled to be held on Monday, April 13.
