Are they bugging you?

By BIRDINE TULLIS, Morrow Extension Service

The Extension Office in Heppner has received many inquiries recently about a small (1/2 to 3/4 inch) grayish or tan bug, which have a musty odor when crushed. They are really "bugging" the homeowners.

The little transients are commonly known as grass bugs, and are one of several species belonging to the genus Arhyssus. They enter homes and other buildings in the fall seeking a sheltered site for the winter. As weather becomes cooler, the adults instinctively look for a warm place for winter. Warm indoor temperatures allow them to be active and fly or crawl about. Often they will congregate near windows, entrances, and on outside walls with warm exposure.

The Extension entomologists tell us that indoors, grass bug to not cause any damage. When in high numbers they are a nuisance. Although common household insecticides will kill grass bugs, simply removing them with a broom or vacuum cleaner is the best method of control.

PATTERN ALTERATION AND "FITTING FASHIONS"
A special workshop to assist homemakers in altering patterns, as well as selecting styles and fitting, will be underway March 25 at the 4-H Annex, fairgrounds, Heppner. Instructors are Cheri Jo Carter, Union Co. Extension agent, and Birdine Tullis, Morrow program assistant. The workshop will be repeated in Umatilla and Union counties.

Computer sessions set

Four separate sessions are planned in early April to demonstrate the uses of programmable calculators, computer terminals, and small "microcomputers," according to John P. Nordheim, Morrow County Extension agent.

The sessions will provide an introduction to these modern conveniences and their "state of the art." Their use in agriculture will be stressed, but anyone interested may attend free of charge. Participants will have an opportunity to evaluate the different machines for themselves.

The four sessions are: Sherman and Wasco Counties - Monday, April 6, 7:30 p.m., Moro Courthouse; Umatilla County - Tuesday, April 7, 7 p.m., BMCC boardroom;

Morrow County - Wednesday, April 8, 7 p.m. Heppner High, Room 6, and Gilliam and Wheeler Counties - Thursday, April 8, 7:30 p.m., Gilliam County Extension Office, Condon.

The program will include speakers from Oregon State University in Corvallis, the Columbia Basin Research Center in Pendleton, and several speakers from computer stores.

This will not be a sales meeting, though, says Nordheim. Besides the "state of the art," speakers will show the use of a terminal to access AGNET in Nebraska, which has over 200 agricultural and home economics programs. The use of programmable calculators as an alternative to computers will be demonstrated. A wheat cost of production program will be demonstrated. This program allows the operator to change any of the input variables and to view the changes in the cost of production.

A record keeping system will also be demonstrated. Each area program may include a discussion of computer usage in that area.

Registrations are due into the local county extension office by April 1 - call or writing giving your name, address and telephone number. Sessions with less than five registrations by the deadline will be cancelled and registrants notified of alternative sessions.

For more information, contact John P. Nordheim, Morrow County Extension agent, P.O. Box 397, Heppner, Ore., 97836 or phone (503) 676-9642.
