

Recreation director sought for south end county youth program

The Juvenile Services Commission learned at their Monday night meeting that Jim Ackley, present recreational youth director for South Morrow County, has resigned. Nancy Moore, chairperson, announced the resignation to take effect immediately.

The commission will seek to hire a new director by May 2 or to assume duties by June 1 according to a commission spokesperson.

Elain Nelson was elected vice chairperson, and Pat Wilson, secretary, as Mary Bryant has resigned that position.

Sherry Thompson, Latch Key director, reported an enrollment of 20 children with two subsidized slots filled. This program provides care and supervision, after school for children of working parents in the Boardman area. Public meetings will be held on Monday May 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the Riverside High School Library for the north end, and Lexington School Board Room for the south end of the county. Those present at the May 4 meeting in the courthouse were: Nancy Moore, Bill Sheirbon, Judge Don McEligott, Carolyn Holt, Sharon Barriek, Dawena Bates, John Edmundson, Pat Wilson, Elain Nelson, Dianne Platt, Sherry Thompson and Bernice Lott. Karen Kenny, student representative was also in attendance.

First National coverup to be exposed June 1

What is First National Bank of Oregon covering up? A canvas shroud has been placed over an exterior sign at the Heppner branch.

"If your want to see what the bank is keeping under wraps, drive by on the morning of Monday, June 1," said David S. Sutton, First National Bank vice president and marketing director. "We'll let the secret out of the bag then."

Sutton gave more than a hint as to what is hiding under the canvas cover. He said, "The sign you will see on June 1 does not bear the name First National Bank of Oregon and its familiar '1' trademark. The sign bears the name and trademark of First Interstate Bank."

On June 1, First National Bank of Oregon and 20 other Western Bancorporation banks with a total of nearly 900 branches in 11 western states will change their names to First Interstate Bank.

At the same time, the parent company, Western Bancorporation, the nation's ninth largest banking company and the largest interstate banking company, will change its name to First Interstate Bancorp.

Sutton commented:

"While there will be no change in ownership, management or staff, the 21 banks will treat each other's customers as their own. A customer who has an account at any of the 900 branches will be able to go into any of the other branches and make a withdrawal or cash a check."

"Actually, First National Bank customers already are able to do this at other Western Bancorporation banks, but the variety of names of those banks is confusing. For example, when one of our customers is in Cut Bank, Montana, and sees a sign for Bank of Glacier County, or is in Salt Lake City and sees a sign for Walker Bank and Trust Company, our customer is not likely to associate either of those banks with First National Bank of Oregon. Beginning June 1, those banks in Cut Bank and Salt Lake City will also be known as First Interstate Bank."

"When you see that sign, anywhere in the 11 western states, you know you can drop in and receive hometown banking service. You won't have any trouble spotting the sign. It will be just like the one at the Heppner branch."

And just what is that trademark, and what are those colors?

"You'll see on June 1," said Sutton.
