

Something for the kids

Millie Hanna, retiring Heppner Elementary School teacher, presents a $50 check to Lonny Watne, treasurer of the Heppner Lions Club.

The gift, a donation to the Heppner swimming pool solar heating fund, is "something for the kids," said Mrs. Hanna. "I'm retiring after 28 years of teaching and I wanted to do something for them."

The solar heating project, sponsored by the Lions Club and estimated to cost over $20,000, is expected to save the city of Heppner over $2,000 a year in fuel bills.

OSU Extension emphasizes conservation

by Molly Saul, Extension Agent

The emphasis will be on "Helping You Conserve Resources" in the 1981 Oregon State University Extension Service family living-home economics program in Umatilla and Morrow Counties, reports Molly Saul, Extension home economist.

The program emphasis, which will continue for two years, grew out of the long-range program development effort conducted throughout Oregon last year by the Extension Service, Mrs. Saul explains.

"Hundreds of homemakers, men and women, were asked to participate in the program development process to help identify the needs of Oregon families during the next three to five years.

"When the results of all the meetings and conversations were tabulated, it was clear that resource conservation and management were the over-riding concerns of Oregonians which Extension needs to address," Mrs. Saul points out.

The importance of careful energy use in the face of increasing costs and shortages and the desire to learn more about managing the family's economic resources were the two needs most often identified, Mrs. Saul explains.

"We are equally concerned with teaching people how to manage their time, how to eat nutritionally-balanced diets, and how to help children and adults achieve their full potential as with energy and economics." Mrs. Saul emphasizes.

While "Helping You Conserve Resources" will be the dominant theme of educational programs offered during the coming year, not all programs will be directly related to the theme as the Extension Service will continue to offer a balanced program designed to meet a variety of educational needs, Mrs. Saul notes.

As usual, the Umatilla and Morrow counties Extension family living program will offer a variety of ways for people to get the information they need to help them live better lives.

The Extension study groups in the two-county area are seeking new members. These are informal learning groups which meet monthly and which are open to all people without regard to race, color, national origin or sex. The lessons are taught by volunteer leader-teachers.

The Extension Service will again offer a series of public meetings on special interest topics and workshops throughout the year. These programs may last one afternoon or evening, or may continue for up to six meetings. They are open to all interested people usually without charge.

In addition, the county offices of the Extension Service have a wide variety of bulletins and fact sheets available free to Oregon residents on such topics as food preservation, home insulation, aging, clothing selection and construction, and child care and nutrition.

More information about Home Extension programs is available from county Extension offices in Heppner, Pendleton, Hermiston and Milton-Freewater. Interested persons may also call or write Extension Home Economist Molly Saul, 13 S.W. Nye Street, Pendleton, Oregon 97801, or Birdine Tullis, P.O. Box 397, Heppner, Oregon 97836.

Two awarded scholarship

The Heppner-Ione Branch of the AAUW will present its annual scholarship to two recipients this year, said a club spokeswoman.

Receiving a $200 scholarship each are Patti Lott Mohn, Monmouth, and Luella H. Taylor, Lexington.

Mohn, a Heppner High School graduate now attending Western Oregon State

College at Monmouth, is working to earn a bachelor of science degree in psychology, with a minor in "severely handicapped learner." The daughter of Bernice and Randy Lott, Heppner, Mohn says she wants to teach multiple-handicapped and emotionally disturbed students. Her husband, Peter, is graduating from WOSC this June with a master's degree in media and administration. Taylor, who is employed parttime at Pioneer Memorial Hospital and also enrolled at Blue Mountain Community College, is working towards an associate degree in nursing. Taylor, who is married and has two children, says she will graduate in July as a licensed practical nurse, but wants to continue her studies in order to become a registered nurse. Her husband is employed at Kinzua Corp.
