'Food for Later' TV series offered OEPBS

A new Extension food preservation series will be shown on the state's OEPBS stations beginning in mid-July. Called "Food for Later," the seven-part series covers canning, freezing, pickling, drying and jams and jellies. The series is seen as a good introduction to food preservations for beginners and as a good refresher "course" for the experienced food preserver.

Produced by the OSU Extension Service, the series features Nellie Oehler, former Linn County Extension agent and experienced food preserver. Nellie worked closely with Carolyn Raab, Extension foods and nutrition specialist, last year in developing the training program for the first Master Food Preservers.

Nellie will demonstrate the correct preservation procedures in each program. Near the end of each of the half-hour shows, Carolyn Raab will join Nellie for a brief discussion focused on food safety.

Plans call for the first program to be shown Tuesday, July 14, over KOAC-TV, KOAP-TV, KVDO-TV and KTVR-TV. However, you're asked to check local TV listings to be sure because the date may be delayed if the Oregon Legislature should still be in session.

The programs will be shown Tuesdays at 7 p.m. The order of the programs will be as follows:

- July 14 - Making Jams and Jellies
- July 21 - Freezing Fruits and Vegetables
- July 28 - Canning Fruits and Tomatoes
- August 4 - Drying Fruits and Vegetables
- August 11 - Canning Vegetables
- August 18 - Making Pickles and Sauerkraut
- August 25 - Canning Meat and Fish

If you plan to view the series, you may want to pick up copies of food preservation bulletins on each topic at your local Extension office, to use as a resource while you watch the programs.
