Court asked for funds for new museum roof

By MARY ANN CERULLO

The city of Heppner would like a new roof for the Heppner museum, Morrow County Court learned last Wednesday, August 12.

The city is willing to furnish one third of the cost and requests that Morrow County come up with the remaining $4,000, stated Judge Don McElligott.

In checking, County Court learned that the museum is presently budgeted for $1,000 for maintenance and repair only.

"A new roof would be saving money in the long run," Commissioner Warren McCoy assured the Court.

County Court discussed possible alternative funding and moved to transfer funds within the budget, allowing the county to furnish $4,000 toward a new roof for the museum.

In other business, planning began last Wednesday for the construction of a partial wall which will form a small lobby on the first floor of the Morrow County courthouse.

"The lobby will give courthouse employees a place for their coffeekes away from their desks," explained Commissioner Dode Krebs.

Morrow County Court accepted the resignation of Hubert Wilson from the Morrow County Planning Commission. Wilson will be moving to Arizona during the winter months.

County Court moved to accept a petition of order designating the Heppner Gazette-Times as the official Morrow County newspaper.

Help to victims

By MARY ANN CERULLO

"We would like victims of crime to know that now there is help," Jerry Flakus told Heppner members of AAUW and volunteers from Boardman who are in the process of organizing a Victim Advocate Program in Morrow County.

As an administrator for the State Crime Victims' Compensation Program in Salem, Flakus explained the purpose of his department to a small audience last Thursday while he was in Heppner. After his presentation, Flakus visited the County Sheriff's office and the Pioneer Memorial Hospital before continuing his trip to Spokane.

The State Crime Victims' Compensation Program was established in 1978 to compensate victims of crime who have no financial resources.

The department investigates all claims of any crime-related injuries and then determines the eligibility of the applicant and the amount of compensation, Flakus explained.

Benefits may also help a dependent of a murder victim, he stated.

To be eligible the crime victim must:

- have been a victim of a reckless, knowing, or intentional act.
- have injuries that have caused financial loss in excess of $250.
- reported the crime within 72 hours of the act.
- have cooperated with the police.
- have filed for compensation within six months of the injury.

No court action is necessary, stressed Flakus. The department refers to police reports and not court results.

To receive more information, Flakus asks that people write to: Department of Justice, Crime Victims' Compensation, 100 State Office Building, Salem, Oregon 97310.

Trip to Heppner brings many 'firsts' to AFS student Camilo Nunez

Camilo Nunez

Camilo Enrique Nunez has only been in Morrow County one week, but he has already been through his first wheat harvest, seen his first deer, his first "mucky" lake water (water in his homeland is clear enough to see through) and has decided that he is definitely not homesick for his native country, The Dominican Republic.

Camilo, 17, arrived last week in Heppner as an American Field Service exchange student - after two hours on the plane from his homeland to Miami, two hours from Miami to New York, six hours from New York to San Francisco, and a grueling 21 hours on the bus from San Francisco to Portland, not to mention a bus trip from Portland to Boardman and a car ride to Heppner.

Camilo and his family, mother, Lourdes, father, Camilo, and sisters, Christianne, 15, Carmen, 14, and Carolina, 10, live in Santo Domingo, where the temperatures seldom stray below 60 degrees. "I will die in the winter," laughed Camilo, when faced with the possibility of a long cold winter in Eastern Oregon.

Camilo, who will be a senior at Heppner High School this year, is adapting to his adoptive family, Karen and Dale Holland, and children, Doug, who will also be a senior at HHS, Diane, 21, and Dale, 19, who are home for the summer. "We get hung up on a few words," commented Diane, "but eventually get it mastered." Camilo has studied English for four years.

Camilo, who will be in the U.S. around a year, has quite a few activities planned for him during the coming weeks. The AFS chapter has scheduled a trip to the Pendleton Roundup and Happy Canyon Indian Pageant Sept. 18 and 19. The trip will wind up in Grass Valley on Sept. 20.

Ione physicals scheduled

All Ione Junior High and High School students who plan to participate in any sport during the coming year and who are either coming out for sports for the first time or entering the 9th grade or 11th grade must have a physical before starting the sport, according to the coach.

Students who fit any of these categories should plan on being at Ione High School the evening of Monday, Aug. 24, and report to the library at the following times: high school boys - 6 p.m.; high school girls - 7 p.m.; junior high boys and girls - 7:30 p.m.
