

Morrow Co. students attend Business Week

Three hundred high school students and fifty of their teachers from throughout Oregon went to college this week (August 16-22) to learn about the "real world."

Students and teachers are scholarship recipients enrolled in the second annual Oregon Business Week program at Western Oregon State College in Monmouth, 14 miles southwest of Salem. Attending Business Week from Morrow County were Michelle LaRue and Anita Palmer, Ione High School.

They converged on the WOSC campus Sunday and plunged into a week-long intensive course of study designed to provide them with knowledge about the American economic system and their future in it.

The event is conducted through auspices of Associated Oregon Industries, the State Department of Education, Oregon Council on Economic Education and WOSC in cooperation with Oregon Chambers of Commerce and the Foundation for Oregon Research and Education (FORE).

Chairing the event for the second year is Paul Hathaway, Northwest Natural Gas Co., senior vice president, who heads a steering committee responsible for curriculum development, faculty recruitment and funding. Campus coordinator is Dr. George Wyatt, WOSC professor of economics.

"Our economic system is perhaps the most complex in the world," Hathaway said. "It depends on well-informed consumers, labor, government and business leaders. The more our people know about it, the better they can make it work for them."

"In one week's time Business Week offers students and teachers more understanding of the business of business than many people learn in a lifetime."

Faculty for Business Week is drawn from throughout the state's business community and curriculum offers an insight into basic economics, comparisons of the American free enterprise system with those in other nations, the interdependence of the American system and personal freedom, the present and future economies of Oregon and career opportunities for young people who are the leaders of tomorrow, according to Hathaway.

More than 100 business leaders from the smallest to the largest business firms in the state deliver lectures, conduct seminars and discussions with students-teacher groups. Students and teachers are assigned to company groups, each of which is counseled throughout the week by a volunteer on-campus business advisor. During the week each company chooses a product to produce and market or a service to provide to the consuming public. They organize firms and compete among themselves for profitability through a simulated computerized management game.

"This management game is a hands-on learning experience that becomes more sophisticated daily as participants learn more about the system and what makes it tick," explained Hathaway.

Students and teachers attending Business Week are selected for expense-paid scholarships from among hundreds who apply each year to their high school principals. Local committees select scholarship recipients and scholarships are provided by interested Oregon firms, organizations and individuals.

At the week's mid-point students and teachers tour Willamette Valley businesses and manufacturing firms to participate in tours of operating establishments.

While the curriculum schedule is demanding, recreational facilities of the college are open each afternoon and evening featuring movies and

Elementary, jr. high autograph party Aug. 26

A Heppner Elementary and Junior High School Yearbook autograph party will be held Wed., Aug. 26, from 5:30 to 6:30 on the junior high lawn. New 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th grade students who purchased yearbooks are urged to pick them up at this time, said a school spokesperson.

For students unable to attend, yearbooks will be available after this date at the school office.

Court busy as Fair & Rodeo one week away

The Morrow County Fair & Rodeo Court has been busy as ever with the Fair & Rodeo just one week away.

Aug. 12 the girls traveled to Hermiston where they went on the air with KOHU radio, visited with local merchants, handed out Fair & Rodeo posters and had lunch with the local Kiwanis club.

On Aug. 14 the court went to Pendleton, where they went on the air with the KUMA coffee hour, visited businesses there, put out posters and had lunch with the Pendleton Roundup Court. They also went to XTIX radio to make a promotion tape for later broadcasting.

Last Saturday the court traveled to Hermiston for the Umatilla County Fair. Princesses Anita Palmer and Kathy Hansen participated in the Rodeo there.

Chaperone Mary Ann Palmer accompanied the girls on their trips.
