

AROUND ABOUT

By JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

Last week Mary Ann Cerullo wrote a "Festival Review" about the Ashland plays which I had intended to present this week. I agree with what she said, but because this year's Heppner High School Shakespearean field trip included attendance at five plays, one of which the Cerullas did not see, I want to report more about the festival.

This was Jane Rawlin's 13th field trip to Ashland with Heppner students. Because Carleena Rathbun withdrew from the group, I was suddenly invited to fill in her place. Now I have attended the plays five times, three of which were with Rawlin-led groups.

This year two attractive senior girls, Polly Fortenberry and Lisa Nix, and two fine junior boys, Wes Marlatt and Glenn Smith, really enjoyed their first experience of professional theater. Each of the four has appeared in high school dramas here and thus has somewhat of an understanding of some of the work and problems involved in stage productions. Each really took a serious interest in all that Ashland offers -- the Shakespearean plays in the outdoor Elizabethan Theater, the performances in the great, modern Angus Bower Playhouse, the Backstage Tour, the Tudor Guild Museum, the noon talk in Lithia Park, shopping and looking about in Ashland and in nearby historic Jacksonville and living in the dormitory and eating in the dining room at Southern Oregon College.

Lisa and Polly attracted considerable attention from the large group of wrestlers attending a summer camp on the campus. Jane and I enjoyed the assortment of printed T-shirts the youth wore. Several shirts proclaimed "I am going to go to heaven 'cuz I've already been to hell -- Iowa Intensive Wrestling Camp." No one from Heppner became addicted to the famed Lithia Water although Wes Marlatt brought home a nicely labeled bottle of it for his family to sample.

The Heppner group saw "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "Twelfth Night," "Henry IV, Part One" and "Wild Oats" which the Cerullas had enjoyed. Of these four all enjoyed the excellent, action-filled, historic chronicle the most. The four students had seats almost on the stage, in the first and second rows, for this one. When Henry, Prince of Wales, (Dennis Smith) lost a button from his jacket, Lisa was able to retrieve it for a treasured souvenir.

Fortunately Mrs. Rawlins was able to get six tickets for "Othello" which was staged in the beautiful Bower Theater as was "Wild Oats," the comedy spoof on Shakespearean drama. "Othello" was most outstanding and impressed us especially because we had an intimate, relaxed, informal visit with its super Desdemona (Joyce Harris) at a lunchtime talk in Lithia Park. Ms. Harris, an Actors Equity Association member, told her intent listeners about her background, about her careful study for the role of Desdemona and skillfully and graciously answered a wide variety of questions. She was a speech major at SOCE some years back who married one of the Shakespearean Company actors before she took up performing. She has studied with various theatrical schools in California and in New York where she had special classes under Una Merkel Haugen who played Desdemona to Paul Robeson's outstanding Othello during the middle 1940's which had the longest run of any Shakespearean performance, according to Mary Heinlein's article on Robeson in World Book. Jane Rawlins was teaching at lone at the time and was able to take several students from there to Portland's Mayfair Theater to see this long-remembered, classic performance.

The Ashland production of "Othello" opened on Aug. 2, 1981, and will be continued next spring. The title role was forcefully portrayed by James Avery. The tremendous villain, Iago, was played by Denis Arndt, who was also outstanding as Rover in "Wild Oats."

An unscheduled crisis, when the school district car broke down about noon on Highway 97 just south of La Pine, gave us a too-prolonged look at the community where, quite fortunately, the needed replacement parts and the mechanical help was available to get us along our way home, albeit about five hours behind schedule. Jane and I had a short visit with Fred Ott, former owner of the Wagon Wheel Cafe, who has now retired at La Pine.

Hopefully 1981's hottest weather is past; yet Heppner stayed comparatively cool while Red Bluff and Redding, Calif., were nearly 20 degrees hotter. Ashland was much hotter than playgoers and performers cared to experience.

This week will see many Morrowites making final preparations for the annual Fair and Rodeo which street banners and Tom Simonton's cartoons are so colorfully heralding.
