Volunteers play key roles in Oregon 4-H

Volunteers play key roles throughout the 4-H program, including the Oregon State Fair, points out Barbara Sawyer, Oregon State University Extension 4-H youth specialist and 4-H State Fair superintendent.

Both adult and older youth volunteers will have active roles in this year's fair Aug. 28-Sept. 7, she notes, filling a variety of roles ranging from chaperones for county 4-H members to conducting various activities and shows.

Older 4-H members also will be assisting in a number of ways, the specialist adds. They are scheduled to be commentators for livestock shows, to work as photographers and to assist in conducting various contests.

Many of the adult volunteers are members of the state 4-H developmental committee. It works with the OSU Extension Service staff in reviewing and up-dating 4-H projects and activities.

Others are active at the local level and see their time at State Fair as a way of learning new educational techniques which will help them as 4-H leaders at home.

The volunteer roles also provide an opportunity for citizens of the state to "have a personal feeling that the fair is theirs and that they can be involved," she explained.

In most cases, the volunteers are paired with a member of the OSU Extension Service staff.

Bob Henderson, Crook County Extension agent, and Clair Rood, Coos Bay 4-H leader, are heading the dairy cattle division this year. Ray Yost, Tillamook County Extension agent, and Bill Mohr, Oregon City, are serving as vice-chairs.

Betty Clark, Tigard, will be vice-chair of the dairy goat show, working with Dave Valencia, Yamhill County Extension agent, and Betty Wallace, Linn County Extension agent who will be in charge of the show Sept. 4 and 5.

Jay Carr, Jackson County Extension agent, and Connie Hatfield, Brothers, are co-chairs of the beef cattle show, with Irene Gibson, Rainier, and Roger Fletcher, Douglas County Extension agent, as co-vice-chairs.

Gilbert Shibley, Multnomah County Extension agent, and Ed Schwartz, Powell Butte 4-H leader, are serving as co-chairs of the sheep show Sept. 3, 4 and 5.

Jack Conley, Monmouth, is working as co-vice-chair of the 4-H swine show with Lyle Spiesschaert, Washington County agent, and Gene Pirelli, Polk County Extension agent, who is in charge.

In the poultry division, Katie Paaso, Seaside, and Sandy Macnab, Sherman County Extension agent, are co-chairs. Working with them as co-vice-chairs are Paul Clark, Tigard 4-H leader, and Richard Bottoms, Gilliam County Extension agent.

Bettie Coe, Roseburg, and Marian Smith, Corvallis, are working with Dale Friedeman, Clatsop County Extension agent, and Gregg Mitchell, Clackamas County Extension agent, in running the 4-H rabbit show Saturday, Aug. 29. They are responsible also for the 4-H guinea pigs events.

Three volunteers, Barbara Burks, Sandy; Rosemarie McWilliams, Roseburg, and Nancy Rand, Grants Pass, are in charge of the 4-H dog show Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 2 and 3.

Glenn Barber, Tillamook 4-H leader, is superintendent of the 4-H photography division. Karl Moore, Silverton, is chairman of the 4-H archery contest, while Don and Donna King, Newberg, are in charge of the rifle marksmanship contest. Both the archery and marksmanship contests will be held Sunday, Aug. 30, at the Four Corners Rod and Gun Club in Salem.

Dawn Larson, Philomath, and Diana Whited, Seio, are taking charge of the 4-H poultry judging contest, while the 4-H rabbit judging contest is being run by Vicki Hertel, Forest Grove, Julie Hughes, Portland, and Sandy Reynolds, Lebanon.

Lee Boughton and Linda Langston, Corvallis, and Val Zemke, Baker, are in charge of the 4-H dog judging contest.

Serving as 4-H commentators during the fair are older 4-H'ers Mary Mosher, Brookings; Karl Corson, Burns; Suzanne Kovash, Dallas; Ellen Fortune, Klamath Falls; Jennifer Danielson, North Bend; Barbara Bagg, Bend; Deanna Crowder, Portland; and Suzanne Tucker, Seio.

School announces milk, meal policies

Morrow County School District has announced its policy for free meals and free milk and reduced-priced meals for children unable to pay the full price of meals and milk served under the National School Lunch and Special Milk Programs.

INCOME LEVELS

FAMILY SIZE	FREE MEALS AND FREE MILK	REDUCED MEALS AND MILK
1		$ 8,350
2	$ 5,700	10,730
3	220	13,110
4	8,730	15,490
5	10,270	17,870
6	11,800	20,150
7	13,320	22,620
8	14,850	25,000
Each Additional Family Member	16,370
	+ 1,530	+ 2,380

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free meals and free milk and reduced priced meals.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them they should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy, principals of schools will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may wish to discuss the decision with the determining official on an informal basis. If he wishes to make a formal appeal, he may make a request either orally or in writing to the hearing official, Matthew P. Doherty, District Superintendent, Box 368, Lexington, Oregon 97839, Phone 989-8202, for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for additional benefits.

In the operation of school food service programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, sex, color, or national origin.

Each school and the office of the superintendent has a copy of the complete policy which may be reviewed by any interested party.

Despite advances problems remain for women

If women are to take greater responsibility for their economic futures, steps must be taken to resolve the problems which stand in the way, points out Alice Mills Morrow, Oregon State University Extension family economics and public policy education specialist.

A step in this direction was taken 61 years ago on Aug. 26 with ratification of the 19th Amendment guaranteeing women the right to vote.

Although women may be equal to men in the voting booth, there's still a long way to go on the economic front in spite of increased job opportunities, greater access to education and the death of some myths about what women can and can't do, the specialist believes.

Figures from the U.S. Department of Labor show that women working full-time averaged about $6 for every $10 earned by men at the start of the 1980's. This is significant, Morrow noted, because more than 52 percent of adult women in Oregon are now in the labor force.

Of those working outside the home, nearly 63 percent hold white-collar jobs. Of these only 13.2 percent hold professional and technical jobs and only 7 percent hold non-farm administrative or managerial positions.

"This is in contrast to the more than 34 percent of the women who are employed as clerical workers," Morrow noted.

Although the specialist is concerned about women in the work force, she is equally concerned about the economic situation of women who remain outside the labor pool as full-time homemakers.

Women constitute about 7 of every 10 persons outside the work force. This group is becoming increasingly older as younger women enter the labor market. In 1979, the median age of women not in the labor force was about 61. It was just over 45 at the beginning of the 1970's.

Although homemaking is regarded by most as "indispensable to the functioning of the family and society, it takes place outside the business world and isn't compensated for in dollars and cents," Morrow observed.

"Because homemaking is seldom done for pay, it doesn't lead to retirement benefits. This means that the woman who has devoted her married life to homemaking, perhaps in combination with a job without advancement and few or no retirement benefits, has little economic protection when her marriage ends," the specialist stressed.

Wives may be left without pension plan benefits because the husband died before retirement age or because he failed to choose the survivor annuity option at the time of retirement.

Even many women in the work force face retirement without the economic security enjoyed by men, Morrow said. Retirement benefits received by women typically are about one-half the amount received by men because of fewer years of plan participation and lower earnings.

Morrow sees women as needing "to work toward economic self-sufficiency by influencing public policy to create an environment where it's possible to take responsibility for their own economic future."

Women need to be involved in the debates on such issues as recognizing the value of homemaking to society, pension and Social Security reform, employment options and job training and re-training, she stressed.

Before equality in the work place is a reality, the specialist believes that "solutions to problems related to employment discrimination, pay equity, child care and availability of education and training opportunities must be found."

Everything nice about this year's PNW wheat especially the quality

Everything about the 1981 soft white wheat harvest in most of the Pacific Northwest seems to be just perfect — especially the quality of the wheat.

Preliminary testing by millers indicates the quality will be excellent as farmers begin the harvest under balmy skies.

"I've been testing wheat for 19 years and this is one of the nicest crops I've seen," said one Pendleton miller.

The protein content is just what some Japanese customers are looking for, and some farmers are experiencing yields of nearly 70 bushels per acre on ground that normally produces 35 bushels per acre.

"We hope our buyers will be able to express an early interest in the crop," said Wesley Grilley, executive vice president of the Oregon Wheat Growers League.

Full test results will be available during the harvest from the Pacific Northwest Grain Standards and Quality committee.

The grain quality committee publishes a booklet every year during the harvest, after testing samples from selected locations in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. Weekly wheat quality reports also are available from the Portland office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Grain Market News.

While good reports on wheat quality are being received from the dryland areas of the Pacific Northwest, it may not be such good news for Willamette Valley farmers.

"We've had a stressful year here for wheat," said Joe Hiller, Stayton farmer. "It was pretty wet growing weather, the hot weather hit at the wrong time, and we have some losses from yellow dwarf virus ... they have combined to cut the yield below average around my area."

Hiller commented that with the loss of several cannery operations in the Salem area that a larger number of farmers are growing wheat on traditional row-crop acreages. "Wheat following wheat is terrible," he exclaimed. "Many farmers won't make expenses with their low yields."

The USDA Crop Reporting Service estimates that Oregon will produce about 80 million bushels of wheat in 1981. Of this amount, about 25 percent is planned to be grown in the Willamette Valley with the balance being produced in the traditional dryland areas of the Cascades.

Your Beauty HELPFUL TIPS AND TRENDS

Get the Best of Yourself

Although they frame the eyes, eyebrows are an oft-forgotten feature in many beauty routines. Brush your brows daily with a "recycled" toothbrush, first against the growth, then up. Then guide the ends into place and apply just a bit of lip conditioner to keep them there.

To find the hair and skin products best suited to you, consult a professional.

For healthier skin and a more radiant complexion, don't play with fire. Stay out of the sun and stop smoking. If you must have a tan, proceed slowly with maximum caution and lots of sunscreen. Cigarette smoking is increasingly linked to crow's feet, lines around the lips, wrinkles and general skin deterioration. Skin is only as deep — so protect and pamper yours.
