

Make it with Wool Contest hold in Heppner Oct. 24

Models ranging from a fourth grader to a Senior Citizen showed the wide selection of styles which could be tailored by the home seamstress at the Catholic parish hall Saturday, Oct. 24. All were participants in the Make It Yourself With Wool contest sponsored by American Sheep

Producers Council, Inc. and Women's Auxiliary National Wool Growers Association.

Diann Morter, Ione, won top rating in the senior girls division. Serena Baker, Hermiston, was the winner in the junior girls division. Both will enter the state contest at Portland January 9, with an opportunity to go on to national competition.

Diann, a senior at Ione High School, modeled her casual tweed jacket and coordinating tan trousers. The jacket featured a no turn lapel and stand up collar, with three button cuffs on the sleeves. The trousers had a welt pocket and flap in the back, pleats and pockets on the front. She wore a cream colored blouse, cameo pin and low heeled shoes.

Serena's winning entry was a turquoise wool shirtwaist dress with lace collar and cuffs. There were tucks and covered buttons on the bodice, gathered in at the waist by a self covered belt. She wore ivory earrings, ribbon tie and beige shoes.

Runner up in the senior division was Karen Wheelhouse, Hermiston, in her plaid wool skirt and jacket. Her jacket was wrap style, gathered at the waist with a stand up collar and bias yoke. The slightly flared fully lined skirt was fitted at the waist and had hidden side seam pockets.

Anne Evans, Irrigon, places second in the junior division with a shawl collar belted jacket and walking shorts in tan wool fashioned with front pleats, slit side pockets and soft tucks in back.

A rib stitch hand knitted vest in periwinkle blue brought first place in the pre-teen division to McKayla Hamilton, Hermiston. The runner up award was tied between Janet Tibbs, Hermiston, in her hand knitted red sweater and Linda Morter, Ione, in her wool plaid jumper.

A semi-fitted, flared, lined, gray wool coat with self-contrasting collar on a partial band, two-piece sleeve and side seam pockets made by Anita Palmer, Ione, was also shown in the senior division.

Amy Hobbs, Irrigon, entered a brown A-line skirt with matching plaid vest in the pre-teen division. Kathleen Brazell, Butter Creek, wore a blue wrap skirt she had made of wool and nylon blend, featuring a buttoned waistband. Christine Windham, Pilot Rock, wore a brown and wine herringbone twill poncho of 100 percent wool.

A three piece suit, consisting of light brown herringbone wool fully lined skirt and vest topped with a rich brown jacket, also fully lined, was shown in the adult division by Jackie Studle, a Pendleton teacher. Theta Lowe, Heppner, showed how a Senior Citizen can sew for herself with her 100 percent wool mohair 7-8 length poncho-cape and skirt.

During a morning session, special fashion hints and sewing suggestions were given by Dorothy Hurrle, of Vera's Buttonhole, Hermiston. She showed a variety of outfits she had made from different natural fabrics. A noon luncheon was served participants, mothers and guests.

Ruth McCabe, who was honored for 35 years of helping girls in 4-H sewing, was District 14 director for the contest. Francine Evans, Irrigon, was show narrator.
