

Around About

Some people may think this is the worst of all times, but here in Heppner it seems like a pretty good time. Worst first--the GNP, the stock market, cattle prices, employment figures and wages at the mill are down--but what a grand new post office, what a great wheat harvest, what a super homecoming celebration at the high school, what an exciting World Series, what glorious sunny days we have had recently!

In the six weeks, since I last typed one of these columns, some local folks have been traveling around about. Eleanor and Ed Gonty made a two-week trip to visit their youngest son Staff Sgt. Charles Douglas and his wife and daughter at Cheyenne. Eleanor reports that they saw much wide open space between here and there, "lots of nothing."

Mary Goheen took a tremendous 27-day tour of China by plane, bus, train and boat. We hope to be hearing more about her trip later. She enjoyed viewing Chinese acrobats, attending the opera and sadly had to become acquainted with four Chinese physicians, three of whom were women. Mary enjoyed the people of China so much that she says she would be happy to go there again soon.

Helen Curran and I had a most interesting and pleasant 36-day bus tour plus a Portland holiday at the Pacific International Livestock Show with her husband George. With 31 other tourists, a happy lady tour-guide and a wonderful bus driver, we traveled across Canada, down the great St. Lawrence Waterway, around the Gaspé Peninsula, down the east coast and home via Washington, D.C., the Pennsylvania Dutch area, Toledo, Chicago, LaCrosse, Sioux Falls, Rapid City, Billings, Missoula and Yakima. We were in seven of Canada's ten provinces and in 23 of our 50 states.

This was a Fall Foliage Tour. I have never seen as brilliant-colored foliage as we viewed, especially in New England. It is hard to say what places we enjoyed most because we really enjoyed everywhere we visited--even the stretches of open prairie. However, the cities of Canada, such as, Regina, Winnipeg, Montreal and Quebec were delightful. We drove through Toronto, too, but didn't stop there.

Not until I got home did I realize that our Albert Connor was for a time a youthful tourist guide in Salem, Massachusetts, his home town. Albert says he lived right beside the unique, historic House of Seven Gables and that he and other young fellows used to hop on tourists running boards (remember those) and show travelers to the old warf, to the historic Custom House, to the Seven Gables and to the various witch-episode spots. Sometimes the tourist would give these guides 25 cents.

After soaking up lots of history in Canada, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and little in Connecticut, with a great look around Cambridge and Boston, we reached the Big Apple where we had a thrilling time getting acquainted with Manhattan and Long Island and being the fortunate guests of Celia Curran and her husband Harvey Katz. Celia is an executive with Dow Jones on Wall Street. We saw the street but didn't get into her office. In our two and two-thirds days and three exciting nights we got a good sampling of the best of life in the greatest American city. Celia took us to Sardi's and into Greenwich Village for dinners and to two current shows, "Sugar Babies" and "Deathtrap," and also chauffeured us out to F. Scott Fitzgerald's "Great Gatsby" territory at East Hampton where Harvey Katz is in business and where they share weekends and some holidays in their attractive home on Gingerbread Lane.

After an early morning walk through part of Central Park, where we really enjoyed being in New Yorkers' "front yard" and where we came across a man still asleep under newspapers and plastic and saw the unusual Barbary sheep in the Children's Zoo, we joined our friendly bus group to cross under the Hudson via the Lincoln Tunnel into the Garden State, New Jersey, and then south through the first state, Delaware, and on into Maryland where we took the 17-mile bridge tunnel across and under Chesapeake Bay into Virginia and our day's destination, Williamsburg. What an amazing Saturday's travel that was!

Our Sunday in Williamsburg was heavenly--perfect weather, an outstanding local guide, top-notch viewing of this Rockefeller Foundation restoration of Virginia's colonial capital. We participated in an amusing little drama in the Royal Governor's Palace and enjoyed visiting several craft shops. We really loved every minute in this historic place and in the earlier community of Jamestown which we visited next.

Because I want to state how much I enjoyed the Heppner Homecoming game halftime show, I am now stopping my travelog which I hope to continue westward from Williamsburg in next week's paper. I believe I've attended most of the homecoming games here the last 15 years, but I have never seen such a great halftime show. It was so well planned and so well executed and involved so many students as well as the Dominican AFS student, several faculty and alumni. Its culmination in the crowing of this year's queen, then the fine rendering of "America The Beautiful" by Linda Gifford and the blazing flag and the booming rockets was spectacular. Many larger schools in larger communities have never produced such a fine show. Aren't we glad that talented, Jim Ackley is here to engineer such a spectacle!

While Helen and I were seeing far away places she talked with her family several times, and we knew we were coming home to an undefeated Heppner football team. We heard about the troubles at Pilot Rock and were disappointed that the Heppner team didn't need to show much of its ability in last Friday's one-sided contest. However, maybe tomorrow the story will be different when they meet Stanfield. We expect they will play well and move into post-conference games still undefeated.

Heppner resident sought for BMCC board position

A resident of the Heppner area is currently being sought by the Blue Mountain Community College board of directors for a position on the college's budget committee, according to Ron Daniels, BMCC president.

The opening on the committee has come about through the resignation of Ray Boyce, Heppner. Boyce noted in a letter to the board that he was resigning on the advice of his physician. Boyce had served one year of this three-year term on the board.

The first meeting of the board and budget committee will be Wednesday, Nov. 18, at 6 p.m. in Pioneer Hall on the BMCC campus. Following a spaghetti dinner put on by the students, the two bodies will begin budget deliberations. BMCC must go to the voters each year for approval of the budget set by the college board. The budget considerations are beginning a month earlier than usual to allow time for building of the budget. By law, BMCC must put the question of a tax base for the college to the voters in May or November of 1982. Currently BMCC operates without a tax base.

Persons interested in being considered for the position on the college budget board are asked to contact the president's office at the college by calling 276-1260, ext. 230.
