Fish and Wildlife Comm. sets 1982 hunting dates

Opening dates for most 1982 hunting seasons have been set by the Fish and Wildlife Commission. The starting dates are established early in the year as a convenience to hunters who need to plan or commit themselves to vacation dates. Season lengths, bag limits and other regulations will not be set until later in the year after biological data on animal numbers and population trends has been gathered in the field.

No major departures were made in 1982 big game opening dates from those which occurred in 1981. Deer season will open statewide on October 2. Rocky Mountain elk season will open in eastern Oregon on October 30 for the first hunt period and November 6 for the second hunt. Roosevelt elk season will open November 13 for the first hunt and November 20 for the second.

The rifle season for pronghorn antelope will begin August 21, six days later than last year, and the statewide early bowhunting season for deer and elk will begin August 21.

Upland bird hunters will also have starting dates similar to 1981. The statewide blue and ruffed grouse season will open August 28 and the season for chukar and Hungarian partridge will open October 2 concurrent with deer season in eastern Oregon, and October 16 in areas where these birds are released in western Oregon. Pheasant season will open statewide on October 16 as will seasons for valley quail statewide and mountain quail in eastern Oregon. Western Oregon mountain quail season will open August 28, concurrent with grouse seasons.

Dates for waterfowl cannot be set until later in the year after the federal framework of dates has been received.

Closing dates and other regulations are scheduled to be set March 20 for antelope, cougar and bighorn sheep; May 22 for deer and elk; and August 20 for upland birds and waterfowl.

The commission also established the 1982 hunting season for black bear. This year's season will open September 4 and continue through November 30, statewide, except for a closed corridor along the Rogue River. Bag limit is one bear excluding cubs and sows with cubs.
