AROUND ABOUT

Justine Weatherford

Another very big week just whizzed by in Heppner. These last few days included much top-of-the-morning fun on March 17 which lasted until the last members of the St. Patrick's Altar Society closed up the parish hall after their sell-out Irish Stew dinner.

The next day saw many gather at the Heppner Neighborhood Center for a surprise birthday party for Director Pat Brindle. Pat really was astonished at the great arrangements made by her admirers and at the generous money-tree given to help her on her way to their family's gathering in Canada.

That night, March 18, was Jim Ackley's Scholarship Benefit Variety Show at Heppner High which managed to draw nicely inspite of a sudden snowfall and inspite of great interest in the OSU-Pepperdine basketball game. Again I am almost overwhelmed by the musical talent in this locality.

On Saturday night a full house at the Elks Lodge helped the twenty-five year old Morrow County CowBelles celebrate their first quarter century. It was so delightful to have Harold Kerr come to serve as Master of Ceremonies and to hear him say he misses folks here like many of them miss him. Wayne Leathers, who now lives between Monument and Kimberly along the banks of the John Day River and who is positively one of the outstanding graduates of "Good Old Hardman University," kept everyone in giggles with his top-Notch afterdinner speech. We understand he is a dignified director of the electric co-op in Grant County - and he must be fun at board meetings where surely no one is ever bored.

It was so good to have the founding members of the County CowBelles honored and to see so many former Fathers of the Year stand up to be cheered. This celebration must be the last of a busy March banquet season here.

Now that spring has officially appeared, many of us are so eager to spend time outside. It is great to see folks getting ready to have their yards in shape for judging as a "Yard of the Month." Heppner's Garden Club, as usual, is dragging a bit behind lone's Garden Club in getting a contest organized here.

This week is quieter than usual. Many families are enjoying spring breaks. Since I have spent several enjoyable evenings at our high school recently and really learned some worthwhile facts there last Friday at the observance of Energy Education Day, I am feeling that the Heppner students are doing very well, most of them are giving extra efforts and so deserve a good spring break.

The last few days of winter saw two emergency situations at my home. Early last week a house-shaking crash in the small hours of the morning had me puzzled, but not curious enough to rise and investigate. Next morning when I opened my closet door and saw all my clothes in a heap and ends of a broken rod dangling I realized what had happened. Good carpenter Boyd Martin was able to install a substantial pipe with a center brace for me before too late that night. He has been very busy daytimes helping with a remodeling and expansion that is going on at Pettyjohn's Store.

On Thursday afternoon I realized about 3 p.m. that I had locked my house with the key inside. I tried every way I could to break in and then was lucky to run into a professional "house opener", Merlin Cantin who said "Now quit worrying - I'll get you in!" Bouapeth hurries home from school about 3:40 p.m. and rushes off to the hospital before 4 p.m., all completely changed into her white nurses' helper clothing every afternoon and (I so hated to hold her up).

Merlin made it possible for us to enter the house and have Bouapeth be only five minutes late to report. How I hope April is a little quieter than March and I can avoid household emergencies.
