Ida. musicians entertain in Heppner, Ione

By JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

Last Thursday night, April 22, three music instructors, some parents and 115 students from Caldwell, Idaho High School stayed in homes in South Morrow County after they had presented exceptional, daytime concerts at Heppner and Ione High Schools.

The three large buses and a mini-bus which transported the traveling musicians left Caldwell about 4 a.m. and arrived in Heppner in time for their 10:20 concert. Their Morrow stopover was arranged because vocal instructor Bill Buckendorf, who taught here several years back still has affection for this area and still has friends here which include Nancy Brownfield and Monica Swanson who spent a lot of time lining up housing and meals for the Caldwell crowd.

The concerts at the two high schools here featured five different musical groups; first, the Chamber Orchestra; then the 80-voice Concert Choir; the lively State Band; next the formally-entitled, twenty-voice Mad-rinal Singers and finally the full school band of about 40

After enjoying dinner, a night's sleep and breakfast in homes in Heppner and Ione, the musicians departed Friday morning for Vancouver, B.C. where they were entered in an international Spring Musical Festival on Saturday. We understand that they spent Saturday night in B.C., Sunday night in Portland and returned to Caldwell on Monday.

Heppner concert schedule announced

By CATHY PECK

A spring concert schedule for the Heppner vocal music programs was recently announced by Kitty Coon, instructor for the programs.

A spring concert by the high school choir will be presented May 6, 7:30 p.m. at the high school gym.

The Swing Choir will perform during an Academic Recognition Awards Banquet on May 4. The banquet will be by invitation only.

The high school vocal students have asked the junior high chorus to join them in a casual, come-as-you-are entertainment evening. Ensembles and solos will be featured in this presentation, which is scheduled for Tuesday, May 18, 7:30 p.m. at the high school cafeteria.

A junior high musical is in the planning stages and will be presented toward the end of the school year. A dress rehearsal will be presented to the students and a program will be offered to the parents. The date for this musical will be announced at a later date.

Area Legion Auxiliaries meet

Three members of the Heppner American Legion Post No. 87 Auxiliary attended a dinner at the Ione Legion Hall on Wed., April 21, for a visitation by the department President, Linda Boone of Beaverton. Those from the Heppner auxiliary attending were Rita Hedman, Bebe Munkers, Martha King and Hazel Hamlin. The Heppner women report they enjoyed a delicious dinner which was prepared and served by the lone auxiliary.

Bessie Ego, district six president of Baker was also a guest. Other units in the district were also represented, said a Heppner auxiliary spokesperson.

Mrs. Boone gave a discussion on multiple sclerosis, her project for the year. The discussion included a question and answer period, said the spokesperson. Mrs. Boone told how each auxiliary unit was involved in the program and gave ideas on getting younger members involved in the project.

"Poppy day is not far off and a very important day. These poppies are all hand made by the veterans in the hospitals and proceeds are used for veterans and their families," reminded the spokesperson.

Anyone eligible and interested in joining the Heppner American Legion may contact Ed Baker, said the spokesperson.

and Karen Kenny were crowned king and queen of the prom court. The court also included Sandra Ward, Lisa Nix, Dorian Forrar and Lee Rice.

The evening began with a dinner banquet at St. Patrick's Parish Hall. Approximately 125 juniors, seniors and faculty attended the ham dinner which had been prepared

Kilkenny book available at public library

By JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

Eight copies of Judge John F. Kilkenny's "Shamrocks and Shepherds: The Irish of Morrow County" are now for sale at the Heppner Public Library. These are recently-released 1981 revised editions of the 50-page book.

New additions to the book include a different cover picture, an introduction by Oregon Historical Society Director, Thomas Vaughan and an 11-page index of names and a picture of the Kilkenny Sand Hollow ranch house. All the text and pictures (except the original cover picture of sheep shearing, are the same as appeared in the earlier edition.

Librarian Bethel Heinrichs states that the cost of the book is $3.95. Jim Farley tried to get some of the books into town before the March 17 gathering of the Irish, but they did not arrive until last week.

A Concave is a Concave, Right?

Right. Unless it's a SCHWERIN Precision Bored Concave

On Display At The Morrow County Grain Growers

Bill Schwerin, owner of Schwerin Precision Bored Concaves, explains the difference and answers some of your questions about combine settings.

On most standard concaves the bars are not set at a uniform height nor in a true circle. These imperfections in the concave affect both the quality of the grain harvested and the capacity of the combine. Separation area is lost and the cylinder speed must be increased to obtain good thresh and separation. The bottom line is lost dollars in the form of lost wheat out the back of the combine and a lesser quality of grain in the tank.

On a Schwerin Precision Bored Concave all of the bars are bored to a uniform height to form a true circle. This precision allows an operator to set the concave at "0" tolerance at the rear, thus creating an uninterrupted wedge from front to rear. The Schwerin Precision Bored Concave does the job up front where the work should be done. More grain is driven out of the straw pack, capacity is increased and cylinder speed can be reduced resulting in better quality grain in the tank.

Q. Why does my concave need to be a true circle?

A. To get the maximum amount of separation area in the concave, the rear bar must be set at "0" tolerance, creating the maximum amount of pressure which drives the grain out of the straw and onto the shoe. This constant wedge from the front of the concave to the rear is never interrupted by a high or low bar and can only be achieved by having a true circle.

Q. The manufacturers have always recommended greater than "0" tolerance at the rear of the concave. Won't your "0" tolerance crack a lot of grain?

A. No. Just the opposite. Most combine manufacturers recommend a greater tolerance at the rear of the concave than we do to allow for their uneven bar height. The truth is, concave settings have very little to do with cracking of grain. Cracked grain is primarily caused by excessive cylinder speeds. We recommend a setting (for wheat) of 3/8" in the front and 0" at the rear. This creates a constant wedge, uninterrupted from front to back. More threshing occurs up front for better threshing — even at reduced cylinder speeds. The slower the cylinder speed, the less cracked grain and higher quality of your product. It's that simple.

Q. O.K. This "0" tolerance and constant wedge idea sounds good, but will it work for me?
