Crop Report

The Oregon Crop & Livestock Reporting Service has released the following Crop Report:

Oregon's winter wheat yield per harvested acre is now estimated at 55 bushels, up two bushels from August 1, but six bushels below last year's record yields. Yields in the Willamette Valley were generally better than expected and despite dry weather, yields held well in Eastern Oregon. Estimated production of winter wheat is now set at 60.5 million bushels, 17 percent below the record crop of 1981. That production combined with an earlier estimated production of spring wheat, places all wheat production at 64.5 million bushels, 17 percent below last year. Nationally, all wheat production is forecast at a record 2.82 billion bushels, one percent more than last year's previous record production.

Barley production is estimated at 12.7 million bushels with an average yield of 62 bushels per acre, the second highest yield on record. Nationally, barley production is up eight percent.

Other Oregon crop forecasts as of September 1 are as follows: oat production, at 5.5 million bushels, unchanged from August 1 and 21 percent more than last year; sugar beet production, at 278,000 tons, seven percent below 1981; hop production, at 12.95 million pounds, five percent more than last year. Nationally, hop production is forecast to be down fractionally.

Filbert production in Oregon is forecast at a record 16,700 tons, up 16 percent from the 14,400 tons produced in 1981. Including Washington, the total production for 1982 is forecast at 17,000 tons.

Prune and plum production estimates for Oregon are unchanged from the 30,000 tons estimated August 1. If realized, this production would be equal to the 1981 production.

Bartlett pear production in Oregon is still forecast at 76,000 tons, 11 percent less than last year. All other pears are estimated at 105,000 tons, 12 percent below the 1981 crop. All pear production for the Pacific Coast is estimated 739,500 tons, 13 percent less than the 1981 crop.

Strawberry production in 1982 is estimated at 58.0 million pounds, 13 percent above the 1981 crop. Despite an unseasonably dry May, yields averaged a record 10,000 pounds per acre. Harvested acreage was up 300 acres in 1982 to 5,800 acres.
