

Methodists ready for next Saturday's sale

By JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

Telephone lines have had extra usage while the Methodists are making ready for next Saturday's Yard Sale, May 14, from 9 a.m. until about 4 p.m. Much soliciting, much scheduling of responsibilities and many arrangements for picking up sales goods and for sorting and pricing donated items have kept the church folks busy for several weeks, especially this final week.

As usual, Ida Farra has created a large assortment of artificial flower arrangements for use in cemeteries on Memorial Day. These pieces will again sell for $3.50.

The best cooks from three generations of Methodist ladies are promising a fine assortment of baked goods for sale starting at 10 a.m. The United Methodist Women are in charge of assembling salads, sandwiches, pie, coffee and punch for lunches which will be ready for eating in the church basement after 11 a.m. They will sell complete lunches for $3 each.

The large variety of items to be sold are to be displayed on tables and racks on the lawn between the church and the parsonage on Church St., but if it rains, will be arranged in the church basement. There will be household items, books, an ample collection of clothing and shoes and some big items, such as a complete set of bathroom fixture and two wood heating systems. The ladies pricing all the sale items are promising to keep the prices down for quick selling.

Anyone who still wants to donate sale items should call Ida Farra at 676-9446, Rita Hedman at 676-9432, or Ann Spicer at 676-5033. These ladies will arrange for the larger articles to be picked up, or tell callers where smaller things might be taken.

Taylor's receive yard of month award

Bob and Luella Taylor

The Lexington Garden Bugs chose the yard of Bob and Luella Taylor as the Yard of the Month for May.

The couple have lived at 325 South Front Street for the past four years, after moving to Lexington from Fossil.

When they moved into their mobile home with a built-on addition, there were only a few trees and some grass growing around it. They now have a lovely array of trees, flowering shrubs and bushes and countless flowers, said a club spokesperson.

They have several antique containers that are used for planters, one particular favorite is a cast iron pot. Formerly used as a whale blubber rendering pot, it now contains hens and chickens.

The Taylors have laid several sections of new turf with more to be placed later.

They raise a vegetable garden each year and have planted a small orchard at the back of their property.

A.A.U.W. to hold final meeting

The American Association of University Women, Heppner-Ione Branch will be holding their final meeting of the year until September, on Monday, May 16, announced Mary Ann Cerullo, branch president. The meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. at All Saint's Episcopal Parish Hall.

The program will include the annual potluck supper with salads only, followed by an installation of officers for 1983-84. Also on the agenda will be the announcement of the recipient of the Heppner-Ione A.A.U.W. scholarship. "Please bring pens and markers, if you have them," said Cerullo. "We will also be doing some artwork for next year's Artifactory."

BMCC students to learn from Portland police

Blue Mountain Community College criminal justice student Mike Nolan of Heppner will be one of seven students to go on patrol with the North Precinct police of Portland soon, said Janet Groat of the college.

The seven students will report for afternoon roll call May 13 and spend an evening on duty as part of a criminal justice seminar taught by Greg Pierce, criminal justice instructor at the college.

The Portland experience was developed for the students in cooperation with Captain James T. Davis, commander of the North Precinct.

According to Pierce, the patrol experience will give students a good idea of the socio-economic diversity in precincts with large population groups. This is the first time an experience of this kind has been developed for the criminal justice students, Groat said.

A.S.C.S. accepting reports of fall-seeded grains

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (A.S.C.S.) is currently accepting acreage reports for the 1983 farm programs, the Morrow County Office has announced.

Farmers have until the following dates to report the sizes and intended uses of their wheat, oats, barley, rye and other fall-seeded small grains: June 15 is the deadline for crops at 2,000 ft. elevation and below and July 15 is the cutoff date for reporting crops at 2,000 ft. elevation and above.

"Very few producers have certified their acreage yet," said Judy Buschke, executive director of the Morrow County A.S.C.S. office.

Farmers who fail to certify fall-seeded crops by the deadline will be ineligible for price support loans, target prices, land diversion payments and commodities under the payment-in-kind program, she said.

Acreage reports are used to determine compliance with farm programs. They also serve as a basis for the 1984 program base acres for farms. Program participants are required to report their acres because the 1984 base acres will be based on the certified 1983 acreage. Buschke explained.

To verify that acreage reports are accurate, A.S.C.S. randomly checks farms and also provides aerial photographs for farmers to identify their fields.

"Farmers who have not certified their fall-seeded crops are urged to do so as soon as possible," she said. The county A.S.C.S. office in Heppner is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Tumbling students to perform at Sr. mealsite

By JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

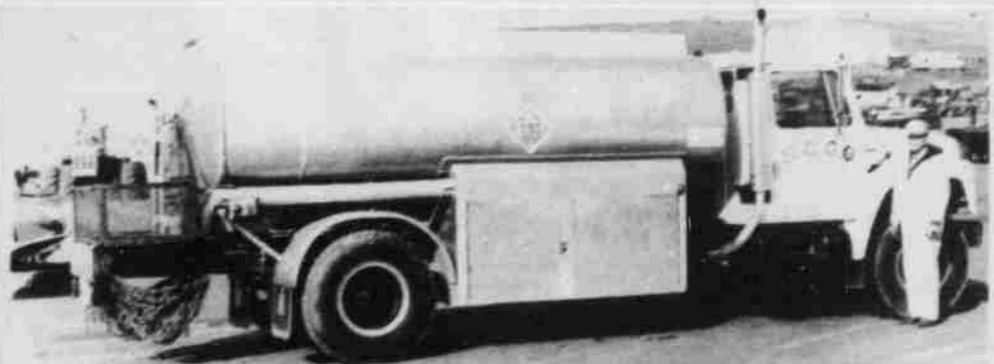

Nine youngsters between ages three and nine will perform at the Heppner Senior Mealsite after the noon dinner on Wednesday, May 18. These youngsters have been in a tumbling class taught by Cindy Sumner. Last year the class met in the Elks Lodge in Heppner, but since Christmas it has been held in Ione. Most of the children live in the Lexington-Ione vicinity, and the class meets at the United Church of Christ.

Their performance is to be their graduation, a sort of end-of-the-year recital. They will show off the tumbling routines they have learned and will do some hoop exercises. Mrs. Sumner says. Their family members and the public are welcome to come to the fairground pavilion in Heppner to watch them. Anyone who would like to have lunch with the seniors should plan to come a little before 12. Anna Mae Steagall, the program chairman, requests. The children are scheduled about 12:30 p.m.

The children who will demonstrate their skills are Luke Swanson, Sarah Bourrie, Jorey Crowell, all three years; Dawn Sheirbon, Jessica Sumner, Jason Halvorsen, Kelly Morgan, Cezanne Owen, five and six years, and Kari Morgan now nine years old.
