

New materials introduced in beginning foods project

Morrow County 4-H leaders and members enrolled in the beginning foods project will be learning about how good food habits coupled with physical fitness can help "Fit It All Together" as they begin using new project materials this fall, according to Barbara Sawyer, Oregon State University Extension Youth Specialist.

Oregon, along with most of the other 49 states, will introduce the new foods materials this fall. It's the first time that the 4-H food and nutrition project has incorporated physical fitness as it relates to health and nutrition, says Sawyer.

"Food for Fun and Fitness" is the title of the beginning foods project which was prepared by the National 4-H Council with support from General Foods Corporation. The new material replaces "Tricks for Treats" which was the beginning foods project.

In the beginning phase of the project, the aim is to teach young people in grades four through 12 basic information about nutrition, information on fitness and healthy lifestyles, food preparation skills, food and kitchen safety, and consumer skills as well as introduce them to foods from other cultures, she explains.

The new "Fit It All Together" materials include a leader's guide, which gives volunteer 4-H leaders help on how to plan meetings as well as suggested activities and lesson plans and a 4-H member's book.

Advanced phases of the 4-H foods and nutrition project will continue to use existing materials, Sawyer pointed out. It is anticipated that new materials for these levels will be introduced during the next few years as they are prepared on the national level.

Additional information about the 4-H foods and nutrition project as well as other 4-H projects is available from the Morrow County Extension office in Heppner, 676-9642.
