

Scholarships available through Soroptimist Club

Several awards and scholarships are available through the Soroptimist International Club of Heppner, reminds a club spokesperson.

Currently, high school seniors of the area are applying for a Youth Citizenship Award given by the area club. The prizes are a $100 bond for the first place winner and a $75 bond for second place. These are judged locally and the winning application is sent on to a regional contest where the winner is eligible for $1,250. The students are judged on service, dependability, leadership and a clear sense of purpose.

Later in the school year, seniors are eligible to apply for vo-tech and academic scholarships. The winner of each of these two categories is awarded $200 from the local club. The vo-tech winner is eligible to apply for matching funds from the district. Both of these scholarships are judged on scholastic average, citizenship and need.

Two other awards are available through Soroptimists for mature women. The Training Award Program (T.A.P.) is available to "promote upward mobility in mature women, assisting them in their efforts toward training and entry or re-entry into the labor market. The award must be applied for before December 15. The regional T.A.P. award is $1,500. The Educational Fellowship Award is available to any woman who holds a master or bachelor degree and is currently established in a business or profession who is interested in going into post graduate study at an accredited college or university. The regional award is $2,850. These applications are due by March 15.

Anyone having questions concerning any of the above awards or scholarships may contact Molly Rill, 676-5455, or Mary Goheen, 676-5212, for more information.

HHS play rates high praise

The followers of Big Brother listen intently to their leader in the HHS performance of '1984' given last Thursday and Friday night.

By JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

Over 30 years ago (1949) the English author Eric Blair, writing under the pen name George Orwell, published his novel "1984." He was essentially a political writer who wrote of his own times, a man of intense feelings and fierce hates. He hated totalitarianism and distrusted cant and lying and cruelty in life and literature.

Those who saw the excellent production of the dramatization of his novel which was directed by Larry Cerullo at Heppner High School last Thursday and Friday nights must have been somewhat disturbed by the fine, serious work. Big Brother and new-speak and the slogans "War is Peace," "Freedom is Slavery" and "Ignorance is Strength" were poignantly featured.

We are all only a little over one month away from the actuality of 1984 in which Orwell tells us that eternal warfare is the price of bleak prosperity and in which totalitarian governments will continue to keep themselves in power by complete control over their citizens' actions and thoughts.

In the play, lovers Winston Smith (Ken Curtis) and Julia (Renee Struthers) learn that they could not evade the thought police. They try to join the underground opposition, but the party manages to smash their impulse of love and their last flickers of individuality.

Every student who took part in the three acts and eight scenes of this production did noteworthy work and surely should remember a few principles which were proclaimed, such as, "The human mind makes mistakes—the party does not make mistakes." Perhaps the experiencing of Orwell's "negative utopia" will further strengthen their understanding of the on-going struggle between democracy and totalitarianism.

Ken Curtis, now an experienced performer, did a fine job with his lengthy role. Renee Struthers, Vicki McDaniel (the landlady) and Danny Fortenberry (O'Brien) were very effective, as was every one supporting them. Sophie Struthers was the loud-speaker and the first guard; Kym Warren doubled as Syme and Gladys; Merry DeSpain, the stage manager, also appeared as Martina. Wendy Skillcorn was the coffee vendor and later the waitress; Renee Lewis was Parsons; Kathleen Clark the messenger and Travis Harrison was the second guard.

The cast was ably assisted by Nancy Martin and Kevin Hughes on lights, and by poster experts Kimberly Hughes, Vicki McDaniel, Jim McDonnell and publicity chairman Carlena Rathbun.

The stark stage settings and the simple costuming made the play's message stand out strongly. In all, the production was one that should be highly rated and long remembered. Congratulations to Larry Cerullo and all who took part.

Ione garbage collection under consideration yet

The Ione City Council read a letter from Ione residents John and Jean Jepsen concerning garbage collection service at a council meeting November 8. The Jepsens were considering taking over the service because it was not proving cost effective for the city to remain in charge, explained Dianna Starr, city recorder. The letter stated that they did not wish to take over the collection service, Starr said.

Ken Culver of Ione was to study the issue and will let the council know at a December 6 meeting if he will consider running the service.

In other business, the council:

— agreed to extend the city's water line to Morrow County Grain Growers' chemical plant just outside the city. When making the proposal to the city, M.C.G.G. proposed that the co-op would pay the costs of materials and would help with the labor involved.

— approved a zoning permit requested by John Marick to place two mobile homes on his property on A street.

Community Theater Group plans production

By JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

The amusing "Thurber Carnival" will be performed by members of the Community Theater Group at Heppner High School on January 19 and 20. Three directors, Rob An-draws-Bryant, Helen Flanagan and Jane Rawlins are working on the two acts and many scenes of this comedy drama written by American humorist James Thurber.

Play books were given out the second week of November and aspiring performers gathered at the high school on Monday, Nov. 14 and Tuesday, Nov. 15, to read for parts. The directors expected to complete casting on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 20. They were also to determine the production crew responsibilities at that time.

Ione Grand Squares spend busy month

The Grand Squares Dance Club of Ione held a "Get Acquainted Dance" on November 17 at the Ione Grade School gym, reported Dorothy Warren, a club spokesperson.

Club members met the beginning dancers, who have been taking instruction from Cindy Osterlund on Thursday evenings at the Ione Grade School gym. The beginning dancers are Ron and Terry Palmateer and Jeff and Melinda West of Ione, David and JoAnn King and Bill and Debbie Sheirbon of Lexington.

On November 5, four couples traveled to the Tri Cities in Washington to get their banner back. When the Sundancer club visited at Ione, they took the Ione banner, inviting the Ione group to visit them to bring it home.

On November 12, a dance was held at the American Legion Hall in Ione. Members of the Sundancer team attended and Harold Parker of that group called the dance. The Tri Cities and Ione teams made up five squares, Warren said.
