

Lexington man bags 5-point bull elk

Earl Papineau of Lexington shot this five-point bull elk last Tuesday, Nov. 15, in the Red Hill area. The animal weighed 325 lbs. when quartered, Papineau said.

What's Your Opinion?

Question: "Did you watch the movie 'The Day After,' if so, how do you feel about it?"

"I thought it represented what it would be like having a nuclear bomb drop on us," said D.R. (Dud) Tash of Heppner. "I wasn't too affected... I've seen other films kind of like it."

'Econo-Eating'

By MONINE STEBBINS OSU Extension Service

Holidays—I just love them. I love the traditions and excitement and food that make up holidays. I love having people over, seeing family, decorating the house, setting the table and cooking all those special foods.

As I was growing up, my family had a traditional menu for each holiday. For instance, year after year we'd have turkey and all the trimmings for Thanksgiving. When I started my own family, I continued that tradition, adding in some of the traditions my husband had been raised with. There were some foods that we never resolved. My family always had sweet potatoes or yams that were boiled and then mashed on your plate and you added butter or gravy and salt and pepper. Yum! His family always mashed them in a baking dish and added brown sugar, butter and marshmallows and baked them for awhile. Yuck! We handled the controversy rather diplomatically—we had both kinds of sweet potatoes! It will be interesting to see what our kids do about that tradition. They probably thought everyone did it that way. If the traditional menu at your house is close to what "everybody does" your meal can often be less expensive. Grocery stores work hard at attracting you to their store. They know you're going to buy some extra foods at holiday times. If they can get you in the door, they have a chance of getting that extra business. To do this, they try to have the larger ticket items—such as the most traditional meat—at the lowest price in town. This big feature item is often a loss leader, which means that they lose money on that item. When they have a loss leader, they usually limit the number they allow you to buy or require a minimum purchase, such as $10.

In this area the tradition seems to be turkey for Thanksgiving, ham or turkey for Christmas, ham or lamb for Easter and beef for the summer holidays. The other meats are always available, but the best bargains will be the foods that will entice the most people into the store. There will also be sale prices on the other seasonal or holiday items. Canned pumpkin, whipping cream, dips, olives, party breads or crackers are all holiday items they feel will bring you into the store.

If your family is young, you may want to choose your traditions wisely. Keep the menus fairly simple. If you choose complicated recipes or expensive foods, you might be creating future difficulties if you can't maintain these traditions year after year.

If you're trying to stretch the money as far as it will go, it helps to take a look at the things that are really important to you and your family. Maybe there's something that is nice to have, but may not be missed too much if you leave it out. Do you need to serve that appetizer? Does the relish tray need so many choices on it? Does the salad need quite that much variety? Try to keep the important traditions. Only you can decide what is necessary to continue.

Another tradition at our house was to visit for a long time at the table. It's an enjoyable time, but now that I know so much more about food safety, I take the time to put the food away soon after the meal. My mother used to leave the turkey out on the counter so people could "pick" on it. It only takes about three hours at room temperature to have the bacteria increase to a level that can make you sick, so I don't follow that tradition either.

The idea is to choose the important and useful traditions and change the others.

Here are two recipes that have been traditions at our house. The gelatin recipe is a tradition that I started years ago. The rolls are my new family's tradition. They're simple and delicious. I have used the ingredients but changed the mixing method to the quick-mix method.

Raspberry Cranberry Mold
1. 3 ounce raspberry flavored gelatin
1. 3 ounce lemon flavored gelatin
1 1/2 cups boiling water
1. 10 ounce package frozen raspberries
1 cup cranberry-orange relish
1 cup lemon-lime carbonated beverage

Dissolve gelatins in boiling water. Stir in frozen raspberries, breaking up large pieces with a fork. Add cranberry-orange relish. Cool. Carefully pour carbonated beverage into the mixture and fold it in gently. Put in 5 or 5 1/2 cup ring mold. Chill till firm, unmold onto plate. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Stebbins Hot Rolls
7 cups flour
1/4 cup sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
2 packages active dry yeast
2 cups water
3 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
In large mixer bowl combine 1 1/2 cups flour, sugar, salt and undissolved active dry yeast.

Combine water and shortening in a saucepan and heat until very warm. (120 to 130 degrees). Use a candy thermometer to check this temperature.

Gradually add liquid mixture to flour mixture. Beat two minutes on medium speed with an electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add egg and 1/2 cup flour. Mix in gently, then beat 2 minutes on high speed of mixer. Stir in the rest of the flour, about 5 cups, by hand or with dough hook. Then knead well—about 10 to 15 minutes.

Let rise until double. Mix down and shape into rolls. We make individual balls that we place on a cookie sheet. Let rise until double. Bake at 425 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes.
