The Fifth Quarter

Sports by Mike Oths

Question: Can anyone over the age of sixteen ever be a true baseball fan again? Having progressed past that magic age (however slightly) I begin to ask myself that question more and more.

Growing up, smuggling my transistor radio under the covers to listen to Red's games from the West Coast, I could never imagine anything more wonderful than to be associated with a big-league ballclub. The men who played the game between the fadeouts from WLW Radio (130 miles away) were truly heroes.

As those players slowly turn the corner toward retirement, I doubt seriously that I will ever be able to dedicate myself to another group of athletes as I did then. More than that, however, I find myself slipping into the recital that I used to hear from the old guys when I was a kid - "Sure, he's a pretty fair ballplayer, but you should have seen ..." The accompanying speech goes like this: "Baseball isn't what it used to be; that never would have happened back twenty years ago."

Why is it that I suspect that the same people who say those things today heard the same speeches 20, 30 or 50 years ago? Pure experience tells me that the very ballplayers who today are "incomparable" Joe DiMaggio, Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, Ted Williams couldn't measure up to the "old guys" of forty years ago. Why do I know for sure that Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig had to stand the test of time before anyone compared them with Wee Willie Keeler or Cap Anson?

The reason, I daresay, is that all of these grand old gentlemen played baseball when somebody was sixteen years old. Having the memory of a Ty Cobb stamped on your adolescent memory, woe unto anyone who would dare suggest that another mere mortal would measure up.

People say that youngsters don't have heroes anymore. People 20 years ago said that youngsters didn't have heroes anymore. The simple reason is that the people who were making the statement weren't making any new heroes. The unfortunate price of maturity is that we are forced to see our heroes as they really are - getting old just like everybody else. Come on now, tell me you could have imagined Joe DiMaggio with white hair and a Mister Coffee to wake him up.

What brought this reverie on? I guess, it's just that my "Boys of Summer" are easing into middle-age, and may all be gone in a year or two. As durable as they have been, Joe Morgan, Tony Perez, and most of all Pete Rose are just about gone. I don't want them to retire-part of me will go with them, but neither do I want to sully the memory of the way it was. I can remember watching an aging Mickey Mantle as I grew up, and wondering who older folks made such a big deal about a guy who couldn't play first base too well. What a shame for a ten-year old to think that Pete Rose spent his career using Grecian Formula and coming out for defensive replacements.

Daryl Strawberry, Cal Ripken, Ron Kittle-they'll probably all end up in the Hall of Fame, but we'll always wonder if they could've handled Gibson in his prime. But as any 50 year old fan should know, Gibby would've sung a different tune if he'd had to pitch to Duke Snider in Ebbets Field....

W.C.C.C. begins men's golf season with kick-off breakfast

The Willow Creek Country Club men's Sunday play had a great start with a super breakfast served up by a crew of gourmet cooks headed by chief chef Ed Hiemstra. Also helping serve a delicious menu of ham, eggs and pancakes were Rick Johnston, Ron Bowman, Gary Watkins and John McCabe.

A total of 44 golfers from Willow Run Golf Course in Boardman and Willow Creek Country Club took part in the day's play. Low gross for the day for the combined field was won by Wayne Kuhn of Willow Run with a score of 65. Low net winner for the field was Jim Wishart from Boardman with a net score of 52.

Low gross score for the Willow Run golfers were scored by Dennis Gronquist, 71, Carroll Donovan, 72, Oscar Shoemaker, 73, and Delbert Ball, 76. Low net scores were posted by Ray Micheal, 56, Dick Nuttbrock, 58, Glen Devin, 59, and Jerry Donovan, 59. Closest to pin awards were won by Carroll Wilkins and John Sallie and long drive was powered by Gordon Lineau.

For Heppner low gross scores were carded by John Edmundson, 69, Ron Bowman, 72, Barry Munkers, 73, and John Boyer, 74. Low net scores were posted by Ray Massey, 55, Archie Munkers, 55, and Charlie Starks, 54. Closest to pin was taken by Barry Munkers and John Edmundson. Long drive was stroked by John Boyer.

Special awards for unusual play were awarded to Dennis Gronquist and John Sallie from Willow Run and to Rick Johnston and Wayland Hyatt from Willow Creek.

Everyone had an excellent time and enjoyed playing under the watchful eye of Charlie Rawlins who was visiting in Heppner and sampling some crisp, brisk, windy Morrow County weather while taking a break from his rehabilitation and recovery activity which is progressing optimistically in Bend said Edmundson.

Rockets tromp Mustangs

By TRAVIS HYATT

The Heppner Mustangs traveled to Pilot Rock last Tuesday April 24 to play the first place Rockets. Guess who won? It wasn't Heppner and it wasn't a close game.

The Rockets erupted for eleven runs and nine hits in only four innings to beat the Mustangs 11-1. Starting pitcher Travis Hyatt was bombed in the first inning with a five run and a five hit attack; that was all Pilot Rock needed. The Rockets scored two more runs off Hyatt in the second inning before he was pulled for Jim McConnell.

Heppner scored their lone run in the third when Dave

Golfers compete at Mac-Hi

By TRAVIS HYATT

The Heppner golf team traveled to Mac-Hi Friday afternoon to play in a four team meet. Heppner took fourth in the meet but didn't play that badly. Mac-Hi was first with 299 strokes, followed by Enterprise with 310, Riverside with 313, and Heppner with 340.

The medalist was Vern Heiple who shot a 69 on the par 62. Low man for Heppner was Jon Mitchell-78, followed by Dave Green-79, Kevin Hughes-88, Keith Kenison-95, and Ken Curtis chipped in with a-98.

Medalist on the girls team was Ann McLaughlin with a -43, followed by Jodi Mattison-52, and Carla Miles-62.

"The loss of Pat hurt the team, but we have to forget that and play as hard as we can," said Dave Green. "The course was in great shape and the greens were mowed very smoothly," said Kevin Kenison. "It's one of the best courses we played on all year."

Heppner has their first meet here today starting at one p.m.
