

Soroptimists honor Sr. girls

The annual spring luncheon presented by the Soroptimist International Club of Heppner for senior high school girls and their mothers took place in the All Saints Episcopal Parish Hall Thursday noon, April 26. About 60 persons attending heard Rev. Ed. Watts of All Saints give the invocation, and Mary Goheen, president of the Heppner club cordially welcome the girls, their mothers and other guests who were seated at tables which were decorated with spring blossoms.

Each Soroptimist was asked to stand and introduce herself and give her membership classification. Next, the senior girls introduced themselves and their mothers. After everyone selected luncheons, Rev. Cathy Barker, lone, was presented and sang the timely and appropriate "Garden Song" by David Mallett, accompanying herself on her guitar. Mrs. Goheen introduced the day's speaker, Francine Evans, Irrigon, a recent First Citizen of Morrow County, who has been honored for her community service.

especially her work with youth.

Evans spoke in a friendly, informal, motherly manner about some of her own growing up in Heppner as Francine French and recalling her graduation time from Heppner High School in 1957 before she became Mrs. Vern Evans and the mother of seven daughters.

She stressed the importance of continually checking one's goals, those short term goals which change frequently and the longer range goals which are more stable. She urged the girls "to continue learning, to stretch, to reach out, to be enthusiastic." She said that she considered a nursing career until many years later. Her concluding statement was that young women today "can do anything."

The Rev. Cathy Barker then sang a lively children's song by Ron Hunter "There's a Monster in the Closet." Molly Rill, Soroptimist Youth Committee Chairman and Vi Wilder, club vice-president, made a few announcements. President Goheen thanked the Episcopal Women who had prepared the day's salad luncheon, the junior class girls who helped by serving, the Rev. Cathy Barker and the Rev. Watts and all who attended.

The gathering was concluded as the Soroptimist members stood and repeated their organization's pledge.

Heppner Fire Dept. sponsors training session

The Heppner Fire Department, the Fire Marshall's Office and District 12 training sponsored a "Burn to Learn" class in Heppner last Saturday and Sunday, April 28 and 29. Heppner Fire Chief Forrie Burkenbine said that although the last session was a year ago, the fire department likes to schedule these sessions as often as possible because they provide good experience without hazardous conditions. The training is in a controlled situation and in this case, two paid firemen from the Hermiston Fire Department were among the trained instructors at the site.

Volunteer firefighters from Ione, Lexington, Hermiston and Condon fire departments attended the class. The process involved setting fires, almost putting them out and then starting the fire up again allowing a new person to "work his way up the hose to the nozzle" which gives a new volunteer a chance to watch someone else on the nozzle five or six times before he actually has to do it himself as Burkenbine explained.

Preceding the weekend class, on Friday, a fire cause investigation was held by the State Fire Marshall's office and the Oregon State Police Arson Squad. Burkenbine explained that during this session, firefighters went into the house and set fires. Other firefighters went in later to try to determine the cause of the fire. "Some found the causes right away," he said.

The building used for the session was a house located at 375 Linden Way, that had been partially destroyed by a November 11 fire.
