to be limited to 4,195 controlled hunt permits in five western Oregon areas. Muzzleloader hunts for 1984 are similar to last year. Most are included in a "package" hunt within which 1,600 tag holders can participate. The package includes hunts in both western and eastern Oregon, with the Sixes unit as a new addition.

A separate Hart Mountain muzzleloader hunt was set for 200 permits for buck deer with not less than 3 antler points on one side. Hunters successful in drawing a permit for this hunt will have a two-year wait period.

Handgun hunting will again be allowed for deer, provided the hunter has his or her tag validated "handgun hunting only" prior to the season. By doing so, the hunter forfeits the privilege of hunting with other weapons during that season. Legal handguns are .25 caliber and larger. Silver gray squirrel seasons are in a number of areas from September 1 through November 7, with a daily bag limit of five.

Tag sale deadlines are: August 24 for deer and elk bowhunting tags; September 28 for bear tags, rifle deer tags, and deer tag handgun validation; October 30 for Rocky Mountain first period elk and November 9 for second period tags; and November 9 for first period Roosevelt elk tags, November 16 for second period tags. The deadline for applying for controlled and permit entry hunts in July 12, with the drawing August 14. Necessary forms and the regulations should be at license agencies about the third week in June.

1984 Deer & Elk Seasons set by Fish & Wildlife

Following public hearings in Bend and Coos Bay and on two different days in Portland, the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission set the 1984 game mammal regulations said a news release from the Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife.

For the first time in recent history, portions of eastern Oregon will be closed entirely to mule deer hunting. In other units, the season will be limited to 5 days and in a number of units where severe winter conditions did not occur, a 12-day season will be the rule.

Seasons for black-tailed deer in western Oregon and elk on both sides of the mountains are quite similar to the 1983 regulations.

The opening date for deer season statewide was set earlier this year for September 29. However, the following management units will have no open season for mule deer: Catherine Creek, Keating, Lookout Mountain, Pine Creek, Sumpter and the Oregon portion of Hells Canyon Wilderness in the Snake River Unit.

In 19 other units where the winter took a lighter toll on mule deer, a five-day season ending on October 3 was set. The remaining 22 eastern Oregon management units will have a 12-day season ending on October 10. Bucks with visible antlers or larger will be legal in most eastern Oregon open areas.

One thousand controlled hunt permits, mostly for antlerless deer, will be issued to control specific agricultural damage problems in five eastern Oregon areas.

Seasons for black-tailed deer in western Oregon nearly identical to last year. Black-tail populations are stable through most of their range. The general season will run 40 days, from September 29 through November 7, for bucks with forked antler or better.

A "hunter's choice" either-season from November 3 through 7 is again on tap in all or parts of ten northwest Oregon management units and a two-month either-sex deer season in the Willamette unit from September 29 through November 30.

In addition, 8,400 antlerless permits will be available for southwest and central coast management units, 100 more than last year. Included is the McDonald Forest Hunt with a limit of 1,000 permits.

A High Cascades buck hunt is set for September 8 through 16 for bucks with at least a forked antler, and 3,500 permits. Permit holders may hunt during the later general blacktail season if they are unsuccessful in the High Cascades hunt.

Split seasons were again set for elk hunting on both sides of the Cascades, with the hunter to choose a first or second period hunt for either Roosevelt elk or Rocky Mountain elk at the time of tag purchase.

In western Oregon, the general bull seasons for Roosevelt elk will run November 10 through 13 for the first period and November 17 through 23 for the second, for bulls with spike antler or better.

Saddle Mountain and Tioga units will remain under a 3-point antler regulation, and again this year there will be no quota on hunter numbers. A hunter simply buys a tag good unit with 600 permits available for one buck with visible antlers. A 12-day season was set.

The Silvies unit hunt will be held this year as a permit entry hunt. It will last five days with 1,000 permits proposed for bucks with visible antlers.

A new regulation this year closes permit entry deer hunting areas to all other hunting with centerfire rifles during the deer season.
