"How ya doing?" (check one)
—froze up
—too muddy
—too dusty
—market's down
—market's up and I got nuthin' to sell
—taxes due
—tractor's broke
—dog died

The responses listed above are the typical farmer-rancher answer. You'll notice that "A-OK" or "Doin' a hundred" are not included. That is because they are never used as an answer. No matter how good things are, they could always be better.

It's the nature of the business to be guarded. In the agricultural world the next goblin waits just around the corner. Farmers and ranchers routinely hedge their answers; i.e. "This is the best stand of wheat I've had in ten years... but it could hail tomorrow."

Some people think ranchers and farmers complain all the time. Well, they're right. We do, but it's justified. No matter how good a managing job you do, a dry spell, a disease, a government regulation or a margin call can sink the ship.

Livin' on the edge of disaster makes one nervous. Gentlemen, I dedicate this song to you:

Jr. 4-H'ers receive awards

By BIRDINE TULLIS

Younger 4-H'ers (those in first through third year of 4-H) come to fair with great enthusiasm and surprising skills. A number of contests both in foods and clothing attract their attention.

Special awards provided by local donors are very meaningful to the young contestants, and also provide the opportunity for them to be in the spotlight of honors for their accomplishments.

Junior 4-H'ers are limited to participation in two foods contests. This rule allows them to choose participation, but not take on too many responsibilities for their first year at county fair.

One thing for sure, their skills are polished, and their fair experiences make happy memories.

C is for the cattle that outsmart me

O is all the money that I owe.

D ouble ewe is that the sheep look better when the cattle market's getting low

P is for the problems that beset me

I is income that I never see

E is everytime I see the banker I kiss his feet and fall down on my knees.

Put them all together, they spell RANCHER.

Restaurant customers still rank beef their number one choice, and a trend toward offering smaller steaks could make the choice even more attractive to "light" eaters - according to a new consumer research study, commissioned by the Oregon Beef Council.

The study found that 75 percent of the more than 400 Portland, area residents surveyed said they preferred medium or small size steaks (8 ounce).

The Beef Council has compiled information from the survey into a four-color magazine brochure entitled, "Beef. It's Got a Taste For Success." Additional copies are available from the Oregon Beef Council, 1000 N.E. Multnomah, Portland, Oregon, 97232.

What's Your Opinion

Question: "How are you feeling about school starting next week?"
"I guess I'm ready," said Robin Mattison of Heppner. "I've had enough summer."
