A concrete wier is needed to improve the Willow Creek gauge, which is just above the Court Street wooden bridge. The gauge is operated by the U.S. Geological Survey. The wier will be about 10-20 feet down stream from the gauge, and will be about three feet high at its highest point, to about two feet at its lowest point, and will be about one foot wide with a four foot apron construction to go across the entire streambed. The wier is needed to provide more accurate gauging of the stream flow at that point. Data from the gauging station is used for water rights, flood flows, low water studies, and operation of Willow Creek Reservoir, 0.2 mile upstream. The data is published in one of the USGS annual publications.
