

Watch for shearing, spinning, and weaving demonstrations

Vanessa Thompson

Craft Village was new to Morrow County's fair last year, but it seems to have really caught on. The spinners and weavers are back again this year with an expanded display-demonstration.

Vanessa Thompson promises to be on hand with samples of weaving and yarn which she has spun.

She reports that her first weaving project was a purse when she was in the sixth grade and so her first spinning was done while she was expecting her first child and teaching the sixth grade at Ione. Artist-in-Residence Vera Simonton was accepted at Ione that year and taught a spinning and weaving night class. That was four years ago and Vanessa has been "off and spinning" ever since.

Vanessa bought her first spinning wheel two years ago and taught herself how to use it. Her first attempt at production spinning was for her youngest sister, Rise Thew, who wanted yarns for a debt Vanessa owed. Spinning, she says, relaxes her.

And now, she says, she is just getting started but plans to teach one more year Riverside High School and then be on her own weaving, spinning and selling advertising for two magazines, "Precious Fibers," and "Shepherd's Friend." Her business name will be "From the Farm," and she will discount cards and a mailing list for winter clip available at the fair. She soon hopes to be able to offer kits for slippers with handspun and sheep hides.

"Choose a fleece" and I'll spin it for you, she says. Although struggling to get started she hopes to do better each year especially when she can devote full time to her craft.

Vanessa has her own animals for shearing as a result of her sister Tori Crawford's praise of fine mohair

Local students attend summer business week

Nearly 500 Oregon high school students and their teachers are expected to converge on the Monmouth campus of Western Oregon State College during the weeks of August 4-10 and August 11-17 to learn about the world of business.

The sixth annual Oregon Business Week program, expanded to two one-week sessions this year, enables participants to operate businesses of their choice through computer simulation.

At the same time they are exposed to basic economic principles, key elements of Oregon's economy and career opportunities awaiting them as employers and employees of the future. Prime among their many lessons is learning the role of business in society from present leaders of businesses, large and small.

More than 150 volunteer business people serve as faculty and advisors for Oregon Business Week. They join another 500 firms, organizations and individuals purchasing $175 scholarships providing expense-free attendance for students and teachers.

Participants apply from public and private high schools throughout the state. Teachers also have the opportunity to receive college credit preparing to teach essentials of economics and personal finance graduation requirements.

Sponsors of Oregon Business Week, similar to other programs in about 20 states, are Associated Oregon Industries Foundation, the State Department of Education, Oregon Council on Economic Education and WOSC.

In addition to their learning experience, most students receive an initial introduction to life on a small college campus. Western Oregon's

Garden Bugs visit Irrigon greenhouse

By DELPHA JONES

Margie Ball was the hostess to the regular meeting of the Lexington Garden Bugs. A fine report was heard on the trip to Judd Greenhouses in Irrigon, where they saw many varieties of sedums and cacti. Next spring the club hopes to visit when the fine variety of miniature roses. The group reports a really enjoyable time there.

The three local garden clubs met at the Rebekah Hall lately, where they enjoyed a class on collage art. There will be several of these on display at the fair. A report was heard on the sign for the park which will be placed in the park soon, will have all the names of the various donors, who helped build the park.

The yard of the month is that of Alda Baker, so take time to drive by and see the yard as it is quaint and unusual.

The group voted to buy some more bleeding heart plants, the club's flower, for planting in the park. These will arrive some time this fall in time for fall planting.

A report was given by Kathy Tellechea on preparing flowers for the fair. Lois Allyn had a fine report on vegetables. With great interest all learned things that they did not know.

The next meeting is scheduled for the home of Luella Taylor, September 5. The program will be given by Mrs. Taylor and will be on miniature roses. The door prize was won by Kathy Tellechea. Those present for the afternoon were Kathy Tellechea, Lois Allyn, Dorothy Burcham, Marie Steagall and the hostess.

Former HHS coach tours Europe

Dean Naffziger, son-in-law of Leonard and Edie Munkers of Lexington, who taught and coached in Heppner from 1967-1976, is the Head Coach of a Northwest Basketball Camp Team touring Europe for three weeks this month. Seventeen boys ranging in age from 16-21 were selected last summer from nearly 100 who tried out. Those selected are from California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Canada.

The team will play seventeen games in Germany, France, and Switzerland during their 22 day tour.

Naffziger is Vice Principal-Athletic Director in White Salmon, Washington. In his six years as Head Basketball Coach in White

Salmon, he has turned a losing program on nine straight years into a strong winning program. He has led White Salmon to five district and two state tournaments in the past six years. In 1982, his team was league champions, district champions, and also earned the eighth place trophy at the State A Tournament in Tacoma, completing a school record of 22-4. Naffziger was also named Trico League and Southwest Washington Coach of the Year in 1982.

Naffziger will be accompanied on the tour by his wife Theresa and two assistant coaches, Larry Walker of Spokane, Washington, and Ron Franklin of Vancouver, Washington.

Troxell yard honored for Aug.

Ione Garden Club Members have chosen Bob and Linda Troxell as Yard of the Month winners for August.

The Troxells have done much to upgrade the appearance of Ione since they moved into their home on Second between "B" and "C" Street in October, 1984, said a garden club spokesperson. Besides remodeling the house they have put in new turf, made raised flower beds around the

Sheep dominate 4-H livestock

Four-H livestock at the County Fair continues to be a critical part of the overall 4-H program. Under the careful guidance of superintendents Pat Doherty and Paula Palmer in the sheep barn, Jeri Grieb in the beef barn, Eddie Brosnan in the swine barn and Irene Anhorn with the small animals, everything is set for a fair.

There will be close to 200 large animals at the fair with sheep predominating. Dairy is making a strong showing this year with eight or nine entries.

The horse portion of 4-H livestock will be the Saturday prior to fair at 9 a.m., August 10. Other entries will come in Tuesday and Wednesday with judging of exhibits Wednesday through Friday. An exciting aspect of the fair will be the retention of exhibits over the weekend for everyone's viewing pleasure.

4-H'ers create western sandwiches

Howdy thar partner - this is cattle country! Ya'll come on in and let those 4-H kids show you how to corral a piece of roast beef and make a good old western sandwich.

They sure know how to package it up for carrying too. Betcha some of the kids even slap their brand on that brown bag, so it doesn't get lost.

Heard the Cowbells came up with this idea to let the kids create outrageous sandwiches. They even provide the beef and the big prizes. Those little 4-H critters provide the ideas and the muscle.

Sure sounds like something anybody would like to see. You say it's Thursday at 3:30? Let's ride on in and lasso a sample!
