Continuing with the story of Obediah Farley:

Obediah Farley was put to tending his new master's cattle along the shores of the Red Sea. He had been a captured slave for several years, and was eating his customary meal of camel stew, relaxing in the hot sunshine, and reading a 3 month old copy of the Egyptian Gazette-Times (a rather boring publication at best) Obediah had a strong yearning for the green hills of Ireland. All of a sudden he heard a tumultuous noise; Looking toward the beach he sees a huge multitude of people being led by an old fellow with a red beard and staff...To be continued next week.
