

Golfers converge on Heppner for couples tourney

Grant Wilkens of Arlington attempts a put on number six hole during the Couples Tournament Saturday at the Willow Creek Country Club in Heppner.

Wilkens was taking part in the shotgun start, where groups of four couples each started at different holes.

Winners show off their prizes following the conclusion of the Willow Creek Country Club's Couples Tournament held over the weekend in Heppner.

Thirty three couples entered the two-day tournament. Complete list of winners will be in next week's paper.

Casting and Stalking

With Dale Rohde

Fishing at Willow Creek Reservoir has been fair, for rainbow trout and smallmouth bass.

Jim Lynch and his son Jimmy spent a day on the lake trolling from their boat. Jim said the fishing was good enough to keep you interested. They ended up with 10 pan sized trout and a 2½ pound Smallmouth bass.

Jim also said his son has been having pretty good luck fishing right in town. Which should be encouraging to local kids.

I talked with Glen Ward about the algae growth in Willow Creek reservoir. Glen said it's partially due to the farm ground above the lake; the fertilizer, the hot weather, the low water all contribute to the growth of the algae.

Glen predicts that in a few years trout will not do so well in the lake. When that time comes the Department of Fish and Wildlife will begin planting Large Mouth Bass and Crappie in the lake.

I also talked to Glen about the brood counts underway on the local game birds. Glen said that they were not yet finished with the final counts, but so far it looks encouraging.

I have been seeing a lot of young chu kars in the area. Perhaps they are on a comeback. If you happen to come across a clutch of birds, please take caution while driving these young birds are very unpredictable.

Doug Rathbun and his son Charlie went fishing up at Cutsforth Park the other day. They hooked into a couple of trout but reported the fishing to be on the slow side.

Everytime I go to Cutsforth Park I think of Orville Cutsforth. In his lifetime he contributed a lot to the community in different projects. Although I never knew Orville I have heard that he was a very good man.

So this week's tip of the Sportsman's Cap goes to the late Orville Cutsforth for all the years of enjoyment he has provided for local sportsmen.
