

Willow Creek project getting underway

The Federal Highway Administration wants to employ local subcontractors for the Willow Creek project, according to Judge Louis Carlson. The bidding of the job will be out very soon and the construction of the project will begin as early as June.

This sub-contracting will include such things as fence builders, heavy and light equipment operators and labor. The idea is to generate and keep money in the community, Carlson said.

Anyone interested may call or write Mike Odom, U.S. Department of Transportation Federal Highway Administration, Western District Federal Division, 610 N.E. 5th St. Vancouver, WA 98661-3893 or phone (206) 696-7728 and he will refer you to the contractors who will be bidding for the job.

Diehl is new deputy for Morrow County

When Glen Diehl attended Heppner High School his senior year, he found a friendly, courteous quality among the townspeople that he hadn't experienced in the various larger cities where he grew up.

It's like coming home and I'm glad to be here, Diehl, 28, said of his recent return to Morrow County and employment with Morrow County Sheriff's Office. I was looking for a place where I could put down roots and work with a high-quality, professional department, he said, and Morrow County fits the bill.

He has six years experience working with the Umatilla Tribal Police Department. Two of those years he was part of the Columbia River Fisheries Enforcement stationed at Hood River. The balance of the time, his work was similar to the road patrol duty he has been assigned here for the last month.

Diehl has served in the National Guard and attended the Police Academy at Monmouth. While employed with Umatilla Tribal Police he served as reserve coordinator, health and physical fitness trainer, and firearms instructor.

The son of Dr. Joseph Diehl of Pendleton spends most of his off-duty time hunting, fishing, and camping in the mountains. He lives in Boardman.

Columbia Basin sponsors youth to Youth Energy Camp

Columbia Basin Electric Cooperative, Inc. will be sponsoring a sophomore or junior from their service area to attend the Nevada Youth Energy Camp. The camp will be held July 18-22 at Boreal Ridge Resort located 30 miles west of Reno, Nevada.

Students will form their own cooperatives, serve on the Board of Directors, with the Board selecting a General Manager from among the participants and all taking part on various committees responsible for the group's activities. The students also have the opportunity to exchange ideas with people their own age from Nevada, Utah, California, Idaho, and Oregon.

Bank employees have profitable weekend

The thirteen employees at the Bank of Eastern Oregon had a fairly profitable weekend. They all went together and put in $5 apiece for lottery tickets and bought 130 numbers. They got 5 of the six numbers and won $721.60. This in turn gave each of them $55.51 as a return on their $5 investment.

This is the second time they have won as a group. Two years ago they won $500 in a Christmas bonus drawing.

Look out Lotto, here they come. They are planning to descend on Central Market again this Wednesday, when the drawing will be at least 13 million dollars.
