

Chamber Chatter
By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

* "Everything's Coming Up Roses" April 12. The deadline for ordering from a Chamber member has been extended to Tuesday, April 4 so it's not too late to order one dozen long stemmed red roses for someone special in your life. This is Heppner Chamber's non-dues income project for the year, which helps us to meet our goals. It also makes the recipient smile.

* Heppner Garden Club members who so diligently plant the planters ask that merchants who adopted a planter not forget to water them. The trees take extra water and bulbs should be peeking through soon. The shamrocks that miraculously sprouted St. Patrick's Day were an additional example of the Garden club's contribution in the community. Business people who faithfully water their planters deserve a big thanks also.

* Now that the Governor's Conference and St. Patrick's festivities are over it's time to think seminars, tours, spring clean-up and beautification. Would there be an interest in traveling to Leavenworth's Bavarian Village or Cashmere, Washington to learn how these communities pulled together to develop their towns; how about Chem-Security? We aim to please and are always open for suggestions.

* Next week will be Chamber's monthly business meeting. Remember, all persons interested in working together for the betterment of our ag/business community are invited to join Heppner Chamber of Commerce.

Thought for the week: "Now and then it's good to pause in our pursuit of happiness and just be happy."

PUBLIC NOTICE

There will be a Wednesday March 29 Executive Port of Morrow Commission meeting at 5 p.m. at the Port of Morrow office.
Published: March 29, 1989

AAU Teams compete in tournament

Front row kneeling: Jodi Johnston, Tami Pupo, Susanna Hansell, Lisa Monkus, Chrissy Mills.

Teams in the area are practicing for the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) State Basketball Championships. One local team is the Hermiston "Spuds" coached by Tyler Hansell for ages 13 years and under. Local Heppner girls on the team are Jodi Johnston and Holli Eckman. From Hermiston is Shannon Dormaier and Chrissy Mills; from Columbia Junior High is Erin Hansell, Misty McCullough and Torrie Philippi; from Stanfield is Lisa Monkus and from Athena-Weston Junior High is Susanna Hansell, Courtney Harris and Tami Pupo. The teams are chosen by the coach. They practice in different gyms throughout Morrow and Yamhill counties for the tournament. There are 16 teams in each age group from ages 15 years to 11 years.

Last year Hansell took the 12 and under girls to the tournament which is held March 31, April 1 and 2 in Springfield. The winners of these competitions move on to nationals held in Salt Lake City, Utah in June. Sponsors of the "Spuds" are: Blue Mountain Potato Growers, Wilbur-Ellis, Lamb-Weston, Simplot, Growers Fertilizer, Agri-Check and Bud-Rich Potatoes.

The effects of not using pesticides

BY Leonard T. Flynn
Nature is not benevolent to humans who abandon science and technology. There is nothing "natural" about planting fields of crops or raising a herd of domestic animals. Nor is it "natural" for large human populations to live without coexisting vermin and the diseases they transmit. In the United States each year, pest-borne diseases and attacks by pests themselves still account for hundreds of deaths, thousands of serious disabling illnesses and injuries, and millions of episodes of illness or injury serious enough to require medical attention. Without deliberate human intervention, nature would rapidly eradicate the world's food producing capacity and unleash plagues of long forgotten virulence. In short, huge numbers of humans would suffer and die. Pesticides provide three important benefits. They make possible an abundant supply of food at reasonable prices. They are the first line of defense against food shortages. And they protect health by stopping pest-transmitted diseases and sanitizing food handling and health facilities. Properly used, pesticides improve the environment for desirable plants, domestic animals, and human survival. In prosperous modern America, small-scale experiments in food production without pesticides can be an interesting and occasionally useful diversion. However, in countries, where food is scarce, such practices can be catastrophic. Without insecticides, increasing numbers of mosquitoes would spread malaria, yellow fever and encephalitis. Without rodenticides, a growing rat population might produce another epidemic of bubonic plague, the "Black Death" that killed one-fourth of the population in medieval Europe and caused outbreaks in major U.S. cities during this century. Without herbicides, brush would replace grass in rangeland, provoking drought, erosion, and starvation for domestic animals. Without fungicides, many roots and seeds would rot in the ground, and another "potato famine" could occur. Without disinfectants, hospitals would find it impossible to sanitize their facilities and contain infectious diseases. Yes, a world without pesticides would not be a pleasant place in which to live.

South Morrow County Ministerial Association

By Pastor Tony Bullman, All Saints Episcopal Church

There is the story of a little girl who is said to have remarked to a Scotsman playing the bagpipes "If you let it go, it will stop screaming." In fairness, I have lived in Scotland and I love the bagpipes, but adapting that comment I would say that unless we let go of our hurts they will go on screaming inside us. Equally, unless we learn to forgive and love we will never be able to convince others of the Christian message. An American professor of Theology said this "We want none of your talk of forgiveness, we want to see a community where forgiving, accepting love is happening and changing personal behavior."

A friend of mine, (not from Heppner), had an argument with his wife one evening. Afterwards, he had to go out and preach the Gospel, so he said goodbye and went off. But on his way to the church God spoke to this pastor and this is how the pastor described the dialogue between himself and the Lord. John, said the Lord, you go back and apologize to your wife. But Lord, I have a very important sermon to preach tonight. You go and apologize to your wife. But Lord, there are hundreds of people waiting for me and we're going to have a good time tonight. You go and apologize to your wife. But Lord, I'm almost late and someone's waiting to collect me. Alright, said the Lord, you go and preach your sermon and I'm going to stay with your wife in the kitchen. Pastor John ended the story with these words: I went back into the kitchen and apologized, so there was revival in the kitchen before there was revival in the church. God has forgiven us a million times more than we shall have to forgive anyone else. So let's make sure that we are not holding anyone in the prison of our unforgiveness, whether the fault was ours or the other persons. Lord Jesus, I release from my resentment.....and pray for your love for him/her. Amen.
