Definition of a Grange

The following poem was submitted by Dot Halvorsen of Ione. Since the local granges are a big part of the community the Ione Grange thought our readers might enjoy this.

I AM THE GRANGE
 "I am the Grange. I was born in 1867 and the Declaration of Purposes is my Birth Certificate. The blood of all the world courses through my veins because I welcome and accept all nationalities, all creeds, and all colors as equals. I offer friendship, cooperation, understanding help to those in need and aid to those in trouble.
 "I am the Grange. I am nearly 800,000 living souls and the memory of thousands who lived and served and passed on into the Great Grange above.

"I am the Grange. I am the builder of community spirit, the sponsor of sound legislation, and the guardian of the rights of free men and women.
 "I build leaders, encourage youth, aid in promoting higher education and stand for fair dealing.
 "I am the little vegetable patch, the backyard garden, the golden acres of wheat and the fertile lands of this great country.
 "I am the forest and the field, the quiet villages and isolated farms, both great and small.
 "I am the cry of the new-born calf, the smell of new-mown hay, the sweet-scented air of flowers, and the peace and contentment of rural firesides.

"I am the first fraternity to welcome woman and grant her equal rights to vote and hold office.
 "I am faith, faith in God and faith in the integrity of my fellow man.
 "I am hope, hope for a brighter tomorrow and a happier life here and hereafter.
 "I am tolerant, temperate, just, honest, and open-minded. I extend my hand in welcome to all who wish to join me.

"I am more than just a Fraternity. I am a group of people striving and working together to make living a little more pleasant.
 "I am a Fraternity that embraces the whole family; father, mother, son and daughter.
 "The Grange is not just a Fraternity. It is more than all of these things already mentioned. The Grange is a way of life.
 "This is the Grange and I am a Granger. Can I ever live up to this great principle?"
