Education workshop is April 20

A workshop designed to inform the public on the new Nuclear Age Education Curriculum K-12 recently published by the State Department of Education will be held in the recreation room on the St. Patrick Senior Center from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday April 20. It will include a background history of the new curriculum, an overview of its content, ways of implementing it in the classroom, and will address common concerns about it.

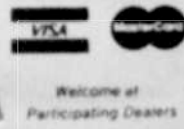

The workshop will be conducted by Don Skinner, Salem, State Coordinator of Oregon Peaceworks. Mr. Skinner has been actively involved in both the inception and the realization of the Nuclear Age Education Curriculum and worked actively to generate participation from around the state in developing and reviewing the material which went into the composition of the curriculum. A graduate of Oklahoma University with theological studies at Yale Divinity School, he has an extensive background in study and working with communities in dealing with controversial issues with a non-confrontative, mutually accommodating approach that focuses on expanding areas of common ground and deepening general understanding of the overall issues.

The new curriculum has been recently sent to all public schools in Oregon. The workshop is sponsored locally by South Morrow County Peaceworks.
