Parade Grand Marshall is avid sportsman

Al Fetsch

The Parade Grand Marshal is a retired farmer and former Heppnerite, residing in Pendleton.

Al Fetsch spends his spare time fixing up his cabin located near Meacham, where he sets up camp during Elk hunting season.

"I like coming to Morrow County still, there has always been good hunting around this area," says Al, "my favorite spot to hunt now is on Little Buttercreek where my daughter and son-in-law reside."

Al has experienced a reduction in sight of his 'good eye', his left eye was lost some years ago in an accident helping a neighboring rancher, but he can still see good enough to hunt.

This summer he has spent a good deal of his time fishing. His favorite haunts are Unity, Phillips, Morgan Lakes, and the Umatilla River when the fish are biting.

Al is a spry 76 year old outdoorsman. He keeps busy growing a large garden, picking the produce and pruning his trees and rose bushes.

He makes several trips to the mountains to cut and split his wood for the winter fire each summer.

"I'm not ready just sit still, I'm happiest keeping busy," he added. Recent projects included re-webbing the lawn chairs, not only his own, but the neighbors and his daughter's, once they found out what he was up to.

Look for Al and visit with him during Fair and Rodeo, he is a good visitor.
