Obituary

Lincoln N. Nash
Funeral service for Lincoln N. Nash was held Monday at the United Methodist Church in Heppner.

A concluding service and burial followed at the Heppner Cemetery. Nash, 86, died Thursday at Delemarter Care Center in Pendleton. He was born June 7, 1903, in Montevideo, Minnesota, the son of Lincoln and Minnie Jensen Nash.

He came to Oregon with his family from North Dakota, where they settled in Hood River. He was married to Bernice Jensen on Jan. 10, 1938 in Vancouver, WA.

He moved to Heppner in 1941. In 1948, he became a mechanic for Jim Farley Motors in Heppner and then for Hager Dairy in Heppner. He retired in 1975.

Nash was a member of the United Methodist Church in Heppner, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Degree of Honor Lodge. He enjoyed children of all ages, and especially enjoyed watching his grandchildren participate in all sports activities.

Survivors include his wife, son Lyle Jensen of La Grande; daughters Mary Ann Palmer of Lone; Shirley Connor of Heppner; and Rose Gatt of Hanford, CA.; a sister Mary Springer of Hood River; and a brother Royal Nash of Portland, 17 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren. Six brothers preceded him in death.

Memorial contributions for those who wish may be made to the United Methodist Church Memorial Fund, PO Box 733, Heppner, 97836.

Sweeney Mortuary, Heppner was in charge of arrangements.

Singspiration is October 15th

The Ministerial Association will hold their singspiration Sunday, Oct. 15 at the First Christian Church in Heppner beginning at 7 p.m. Everyone is invited to come and get together for an hour of singing along with some special music. Refreshments will be served.

Chamber Chatter
By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

How do you react when you see a Public Hearing Notice? Do you ignore it...think it doesn't apply to you...prefer someone else handled it...wish you could be a part of it but feel you lack the knowledge, or...turn to the TV schedule? Hearings seem to be a large part of the Morrow County activity lately with the dam, Willow Creek Lake, and the prison on the newsfront. By participating in a public hearing you can learn a great deal about the issue, about the government body, and about the supporters and opponents of the issue.

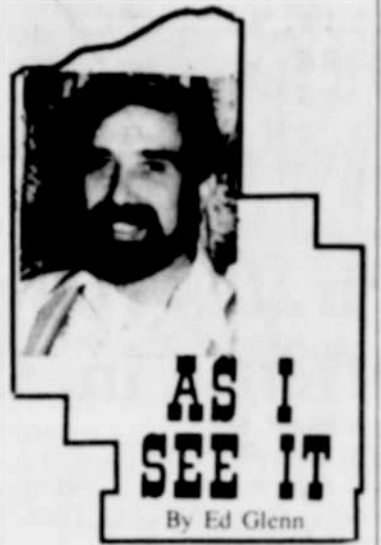

Hearings are held for communicating, learning and informing. They allow the public body to learn what citizens think through communication (recent prison hearing). They allow the governmental body to inform the public about an issue followed by question and discussion. (The dam hearing was an example. It gave the public the opportunity to voice their feelings about the water level of the lake. Did you do so? If you have feelings on this, now is the time to be heard through letters.) Last, some hearings are held to get help from the public in drafting laws or ordinances.

As a citizen, it is our right and responsibility to be involved in hearings. Not only does it put us on the scene receiving first hand knowledge and the opportunity to share our ideas, it is a viable and useful part of the democratic process at every level of government. Hesitant about testifying? The Family Community Leadership Resource Manual has twelve simple steps on how to give testimony at a public hearing. Contact your Chamber Manager or an FCL member for further information.

Next week the Chamber program will be Harry Drew, Pendleton Chamber Executive Director.

Thought for the week: "The clash of ideas is the sound of freedom."

Not On Your Life

I don't think it's unusual to eye someone else's job with envy. I often see a job that I say, "I could do that."

It's not like I haven't tried a few different things. I started out a farmer, sold shoes and painted houses to get through college, practiced law for 15 years, started a wood box company, a winery and now back to farming; herbs and flowers.

My standard answer to the inquiry: "Ed, just what are you going to do when you grow up?" with: "I don't even know what I'm going to do next."

I have figured out that there are some jobs I would do, not on your life.

Take the gal who proof reads this column. Now that job requires a great deal of skill in the use of the language, attention to the most minute detail and immanent persistence to make me look like a proficient writer. She does that job very well; so well that I am both surprised and pleased with the result. I couldn't do that job, on your life.

My custom hay harvester friends are a unique breed. With swathers, rakes, bailers and harrow beds, working for several different growers, these fellows are masters at keeping their customers happy while at the same time keeping a schedule which permits harvest of everyone's hay at something like the right time. Seems everyone wants to cut or bale on the same day and each grower thinks he should have priority over the other. It's a constant struggle, with every grower making immediate demands and the custom operator must jockey those demands to make some sense out of chaos. I couldn't do that. I'd lose my temper and tell some of them to go fly a kite. They would and I'd be out of business. Be a custom harvester? Not on your life.

I've dabbled in elective politics a time or two, without substantial success. Good thing too, since I don't think I could do that either.

I've watched two local politicians recently, both with some large measure of admiration. One, faced with rising opposition to a position he had taken some months ago, refused to change that position. He stood by the early position because he continued to believe in the process, and he continued to believe that position was both in the public interest and met with public approval.

Truly an admirable trait in a politician. But he was all alone in his deliberative body. To some he looked kind of silly, casting the one dissenting vote. It took courage to stand by his convictions and not give in to the political wind of the moment. I like that in an elected official even though his position was different than my own.

The other fellow was on the prevailing side, but that's not his mark in my book. He had the courage (or some would call it lack of good judgement) to drop in the coffee shop this morning. That's happened before and it was no different this morning. He's the butt of all jokes, criticized by nearly everyone for every problem, big or small and the demands for action range from the most insignificant to the absurd.

And he took it pretty good naturedly, as usual, without going out of his way to offend anyone. He was serious about the serious stuff, joked about the rest of it and went away with another little look at what's on the minds of his constituents. I like that a lot.

But I couldn't do either job. Not on your life.
