Chamber Chatter

By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

* This week was a fifth Tuesday for Chamber, which meant no meeting. It crept up on all of us, as many had pertinent issues to discuss including stands on ballot measures. Some measures are bad news for Oregon's economy. Please visit with people, keep your ears open, and be aware that your vote does count. Our business meeting will be election day, November 6.

* Ken Turner has good news to share with Chamber. Hatfield called him with the information that funding for the Willow Creek Lake recreation area has finally gone through. Now it's up to us to pass our local related measure.

* Cycle Oregon III funds arrived at long last and have been distributed. We hope to the satisfaction of all concerned. A percentage was taken off the top for: expenses, donations to some organizations involved in ways other than food service; and for partial funding for Christmas decoration refurbishment. The remainder was disbursed to the 17 organizations who cooked, set-up, served, and cleaned up for dinner and breakfast. These funds will all go back into our area in the form of scholarships, improvements, projects, helping others...that will be up to the non-profit groups involved. Again, the best part of the entire community endeavor was the pride and the upbeat spirit of having accomplished this together. "What we believe, we can achieve." Numerous people at the Ashland conference last week said they had heard "Heppner was the best." We think so.

* See you Tuesday at chamber. Board meeting will be held at the Elks at 11 a.m. prior to lunch.

Thought for the week: "The measure of your real character is what you'd do if you knew you'd never be found out."

St. Patrick's Senior Center Bulletin Board

By Jane Rawlins

Good things are worth waiting for, it is said, and it looks like our new bus will at last be delivered this Friday afternoon. On the morning of the same day the AAA Advisory Committee meets here and in the p.m. the County Special Transportation Fund Committee meets. Several out of town guests from neighboring senior centers will be present.

Other good things came this week, too. The Housing Authority announced that with two new residents, only one apartment is vacant and that a new custodian has been chosen to occupy the first-floor apartment. A healthy check from the Cycle III event arrived. In addition to the pleasure of participating in that, Halloween kids dropped by our front room to receive treats and show off their costumes. News arrived that the Ione Lions will be giving a bingo party at our potluck November 11. A gift of several books (for our coming library) was received in memory of Edith Nicholson, and Theta Lowe displayed some of the quilters' work at the Wednesday dinner.

Our volunteer office staff has been increasing the RSVP activities in community service to include folding bulletins for the Extension and making tapes for the Junior High for use in all departments of their reading program. Any senior interested in participating in RSVP is invited to come by the office and sign up.

Next week: Monday at 1 p.m. Quilters and Company. Until holidays they are working on individual quilting projects. Last week Vern Batty showed how to make fancy patchwork Christmas stockings. Heppner Garden Club meets in the front room at 6:30.

Tuesday: the election vote counters in the dining room all day. Swing Into Shape exercise will be in the front room at 10 a.m.

Wednesday: Before the meal at noon we hold an election of three directors on the Senior Center Board. The menu is macaroni and beef with cheese, peas, tossed salad, hot bread, pineapple upside down cake. Christian Life Center is serving. At 1 p.m. the Nutrition Site Committee meets.

Thursday: Swing Into Shape at 10 a.m. in the dining room.

Greenup crowned queen Homecoming Court

Last week's Homecoming court picture caption incorrectly listed Kim Johnston and Greg Greenup. Following is a correct listing of the 1990 Homecoming court and their fathers.

Water leaks mean

$ down the drain

A faucet that leaks one drop per second wastes 2,400 gallons per year, enough water to run 160 full cycles on an automatic dishwasher, so it's important to check and replace faulty washers.

Careful use of appliances and other water-related equipment can also put more money in your pocket, according to Carol Bennett, Morrow County Extension home economist.

Other economy measures include washing only full loads--unless your equipment has water level controls--and buying a wash with a built-in suds return.

Running your dishwasher only when it's full and letting your dishes air-dry will conserve both water and electricity. If you wash dishes by hand, use a dishpan, put dishes in a rack and rinse them all at once.

Watering your lawn and washing your car can account for as much as 50 percent of your warm weather water use, according to water conservation authorities.

To cut lawn watering usage, water in early morning with a low spraying sprinkler to decrease evaporation losses, and mulch around trees and shrubs to hold moisture longer.

Use a bucket of soapy water to wash your car and rinse it with a hose that has a shut-off nozzle.

Insure your 4-H or FFA project animal.
