

Ione community pep band turns out

By Ann Morter

The Ione Community Pep Band was out in full force once again last weekend at the two home games. The band, which was organized last year to help the junior high band provide spirited tunes at basketball games, is composed of about a dozen

Ione alums and townspeople. Some played in college bands while others had not played since high school or even junior high.

The band practices on Monday evenings from 7:30 to 8:30 under the direction of Ione music teacher, Geneva Mathews. They play only at the home games during the regular season but gladly hit the road if either Cardinal team progresses into post-season action.

Mrs. Mathews says that the band is made up of a "bunch of characters" and encourages anyone who is feeling the least bit musical to join, especially if they play an upper woodwind (flute or clarinet) or lower brass (trombone) instrument. "We have a lot of fun," she says.
