Oregon trees subject of Garden Club

"Trees to Know in Oregon" was the subject for discussion at the Ione Garden Club meeting March 13 at the home of Virginia Peck with Joyce Buchanan acting as co hostess.

"Oregon is known as the forest state and leads all 50 states in the production of lumber," stated Jean Nelson, program leader. For many years trees were thought of in relation to their commercial value but now conservation of our water, wildlife and clean air is receiving more emphasis. Since much recreation time is spent in forests the average person needs to know more about the different trees to enjoy them. For instance, the Douglas fir (pseudotsuga menziesii) is the State tree and grows in 35 out of the 36 counties in the state. How does one know this tree? Look for special features such as the appearance of the cones, length, number and growth pattern of the needles, size of tree, bark configuration, area in which it grows and its shape. Most trees fall into the class of the needleleaves (conifers), which are softwoods, hardwoods, or the broadleaf, which are mostly deciduous.

Special guest for the day was Virginia Grogan, Blue Mountain District #10 from Milton-Freewater. Grogan reminded members about the district meeting to be held at Hermiston on April 19.

Pat Pettyjohn, junior chairman, reported that the fifth grade Ione elementary class made 13 posters on the subject "Protect our Butterfly" for the conservation contest.

Leila Palmer, therapy chairman, announced that the club would be placing daffodils in the rooms of Pioneer Nursing Home patients on Thursday, March 14 and serve cake and visit with the people at that time. Helen Martin will play songs for them.

Plans for the annual plant sale to be held April 23 at the Ione Legion Hall were announced by the chairman Delta Huber. This is a means of sharing plants in members' gardens.
