

Vector control to spray for midges

The Morrow County Vector Control will be spraying for midges in Heppner this summer. Midges emerge from Willow Creek reservoir in huge numbers and are attracted to the lights in town.

The midge is an aquatic fly. Although the adults do not bite, they are so numerous that they become a severe pest. Complaints from past years have prompted the U.S. Corps of Engineers to fund control measures. As a result, vector control will spray for midge control during times of heavy emergence.

The corps has also funded a study at Willow Creek reservoir to determine what insects are present, and to make control recommendations if appropriate. Dr. Richard Zack, an aquatic entomologist from Washington State University will conduct the study and report to the Heppner City Council at the end of the summer.

The timing of vector control sprays will depend on the emergence of the midges and will occur irregularly. Homeowners who wish to be notified of upcoming spray programs should call Heppner City Hall and they will try to notify families when they will be spraying.

Mrs. Calvert's second grade class adopted a nursing home patient during the school year and went to the hospital to visit them once a week. The students made things for them throughout the year and read to them. The last week of school students were treated to cookies and punch with their adopted nursing home patient. ## Bull Prairie open for camping

Bull Prairie Lake on the Heppner Ranger District is open this weekend for camping. Bull Prairie is 36 miles south of Heppner and 15 miles north of Spray on Highway 207.

Bull Prairie, one of the most popular fishing and camping facilities on the Umatilla National Forest has 40 picnic sites and 26 tent and trailer sites. The campground provides water, waste dumping and restroom facilities. There is a $5 fee per day for a camping site. Campers with a Golden Age Card may camp for $2.50.

The lake features rainbow trout, blue gill, and brook trout. A trail circles the lake and hikers can encounter various plant and animal life, bridges and fishing docks.

New hosts this year at Bull Prairie are Evelyn and Clyde Bosteder.

Over the past several years, the district's recreation department has increased developments at the park and improved facilities. This year the district has installed four handicapped picnic tables and are currently developing a handicapped restroom and an accessible wheelchair path to a fishing dock.

Several weeks ago, district employees spent one day getting the area ready for the coming season, clearing trees and brush, removing garbage, painting, planting trees, building trails and making many other improvements.
