Guest speaker planned at Christian Life Center church

Rev. 'Cap' Marks

On Sunday, July 21, the Rev. Vernon "Cap" Marks will be the guest speaker at the Christian Life Center for the 10:30 a.m. service. Rev. Marks is the assistant superintendent of the Oregon District of the Assemblies of God.

Rev. Marks was born and raised in Oregon. He pastored Rogue River Assembly of God church for 17 years prior to serving as assistant superintendent. During his time there the church grew to an average of 340 in Sunday morning attendance. It established a Christian school and day care, started a new church, mothered a home missions church, and began a radio broadcast.

Rev. Marks and his wife LaVern are strong supporters of home and foreign missions, and believe that the local church is the most important and effective entity in its community.

The public is invited to attend, and nursery care and children's church are available for children through third grade.

Elms weakened by elm leaf beetle

If you have an elm tree in your yard, it is probably infested with the elm leaf beetle. This pest causes damage to elm leaves in both the larval and adult stage of growth. It feeds on the leaves and skeletonizes them, eventually defoliating the tree.

The elm leaf beetle is about 1/5 inch long. Its wing covers are yellowish to orange, and have a black stripe both down the middle and the sides. It lays lemon-colored eggs on the underside of elm leaves in rows.

As the young larvae emerge they feed on the underside of the elm leaf, causing severe damage. There can be two generations per year in Morrow County. The tree is badly weakened by the defoliation caused by this insect.

Control of elm leaf beetles requires a thorough foliar spray at the first sign of leaf damage. The earlier the beetle larvae are sprayed, the easier they are to control. While there are several insecticides on the market, it is necessary to have good equipment to spray the entire tree. This usually means having a professional do the job.

Sheriff reports special occasions serve as tipoffs for burglars

"Special occasions present special security problems," warns Sheriff Roy Drago of Morrow County. "Social get-togethers serve as tipoffs for burglars."

"Any advertised absence from the home invites burglars. These special events deserve special precautions," says Sheriff Drago.

For instance, a death usually results in an obituary in the local newspaper, conveniently listing the time and place of services. However, such announcements also inform burglars that every member of a particular household will be absent at a certain time.

Wedding notices can also tempt burglars and thus easily spoil a happy occasion. Mere conversation with a caterer, florist or other party involved in the wedding festivities often reveals when a home will be left unattended. Even a passerby noticing a mother and daughter leaving the house with a bridal gown instantly knows that valuable wedding gifts lay unguarded inside. In such cases, it is wise to arrange for a house-sitter or ask your neighbors to keep a close eye out for suspicious persons or vehicles.

"Everyday occurrences also entice burglars," says Sheriff Drago. Burglars take note of daily routines in which a home is left unguarded at specific times of the day or night. Even leaving the house with a tennis racket or golf clubs gives burglars hours to work undisturbed.

"In instances like these, make sure your home is well guarded and remember that sometimes an observant neighbor can be an asset. Don't invite trouble by leaving your home unprotected; many thieves are professionals and will gladly oblige such an invitation," concluded Sheriff Drago.

Linda Hall miss teen finalist

Linda Hall, granddaughter of Gene and Harriet Hall of Heppner, was chosen as a "merit finalist" at the recent Miss Teen Pennsylvania Scholarship and Recognition Pageant. Linda is the daughter of David and Nancy Hall, former Heppner residents, currently of State College, PA. She is a junior at State College Area High School. The three day event was held on the Saint Francis College Campus in Loretto, PA. Linda advanced from the final field of 125 young women to be named as one of 12 "merit finalists". The merit finalist competition capped the three-day event.

The candidates were judged in six areas, including: scholastic record; achievement and service to school and community; personal development of talents and skills; written general awareness test; personal projection in formal wear; and judge's interview. Katina Showman from Somerset, PA was named the 1991 Miss Teen of Pennsylvania.

As a part of a separate competition, Linda was among 23 contestants to be chosen to compete in a talent review. Linda performed a tap dance to "Wake Me Up Before You Go."

CARD OF THANKS

Thank you for Doctors Appreciation Day (DAD). It was readily evident that countless hours were spent to cover all the details necessary to make it an event we'll always remember.

Prior to DAD the chairwoman of the Morrow County Medical Board assured us that DAD would be a small low-key event akin to a church potluck and to just relax. But she was wrong.

The golfing event was well-attended and the weather cooperated to make it a very pleasurable day. The array of desserts really hit the spot.

The ladies luncheon was eloquent. The buffet and table settings were done with great care and creativity. The entertainment was high quality.

Although we were told to dress casual for dinner, when a matching pink corsage and boutonniere arrived at our house earlier in the day, not only did we realize what type of apparel we were to wear, but what color.

The main event was flawless and an ultimate experience for us. From the minute we walked into the Elk's Club and saw the sea of faces-friends, neighbors, patients and family-we knew it was going to be a memorable evening.

Obviously great attention had been given to atmosphere-Italian decor and food with Jeff Wallace at the piano. The sit-down dinner was heralded by Pastor Hoobing's reflective prayer and served by volunteer high school students.

We had anticipated perhaps one or two short speeches, and in fact had planned to write a short speech for our own, but in the hustle-bustle of trying to find dressy pink clothes, we were caught off guard.

We had no idea that Larry Mills who is second to none in his MC capabilities, would be in charge of the microphone-that was scary. It became immediately obvious he had been given too much information and knew how to use it.

The letters from friends, family
