Exhibitors reminded about drug regs

During fairs, many market animals are exhibited and sold, now is the time to remind ourselves of compliance requirements with the FDA/USDA Residue Avoidance Program regulations for drugs. Animals that do not go through withdrawal times from medication correctly are unsuitable for slaughter.

Withdrawal period vary by drug and animal species. Cattle withdrawal times, for example, can range anywhere from one to 80 days, depending on the drug. For swine, the range is between one and 70 days; for sheep, it is between three and 40 days; poultry ranges from one to 28 days.

If you have any question about any drug, read the label. If there is still a question, contact your local veterinarian.
