Garden Bugs elect officers

The regular meeting of the Lexington Garden Bugs was held Feb. 4 at the home of Delta Huber. Present besides the hostess were Annetta Padberg, Kathy Tellechea, Phyllis Anderson, Marg Ball, Frances Murty, Lois Allyn and guest Jane Rawlins.

Guest speaker for the evening was Bill Rawlins, who presented a very interesting talk on growing dahlias. Some of the points he mentioned were "smaller tubers actually work better." Huge size tubers allow a plant to draw nourishment from the tuber, rather than developing a really good root system. Tubers are planted on their sides. Dahlias need well drained soil and protection from the wind. Thrips and aphids are the main insect problems. Tubers have to be dug up in the fall before freezing weather, washed after being dug and stored in a cool, dry place.

Dahlias can be all the way from small, single flowers to huge 17" blooms with many and varied shape petals and colors.

"It was a special pleasure to have Mr. and Mrs. Rawlins with us," said a spokesperson. Election of officers for the coming year was held. Delta Huber was elected chairman; Lois Allyn vice-chairman; Kathy Tellechea, secretary.
