Dear friends of Clara Jenkins, Perhaps you sent a lovely card, or sat quietly in a chair.

Perhaps you sent a floral piece, If so we saw it there.

Perhaps you spoke the kindest words, as any friend could say.

Perhaps you were not there at all, just thought of us that day.

Whatever you did to console our hearts, we thank you so much whatever the part.

Medicines that Lower Blood Cholesterol

The primary method advocated for lowering high cholesterol blood levels in most adults is through a reduction in foods which contain cholesterol. If dietary measures fail to produce the reduction desired, many physicians will prescribe a blood cholesterol lowering agent.

Bile Acid Sequestrants: Most physicians recognize the bile acid sequestrants (cholestyramine and colestipol) as the first drugs of choice to be used in adults because they do not cause systemic side effects. These medicines bind bile acid salts, resulting in lower levels of cholesterol in the blood.

Nicotinic Acid: This medicine is an excellent choice after the bile acid sequestrants or in combination with these medicines. Nicotinic acid interferes with the production of LDL cholesterol (so-called "bad cholesterol").

Enzyme Inhibitors: These medicines, which include lovastatin, block the formation of cholesterol by inhibiting an enzyme.

Fibric Acid Medicines: This group of medicines, which includes clofibrate and gemfibrozil, increases HDL ("good") cholesterol and lowers LDL cholesterol.

Probuocol: This medicine increases the breakdown of LDL cholesterol.
