

If flying makes you nervous, Trojan ought to scare your pants off!

The federal regulators (FAA) who oversee the safety of our airlines state the odds of disaster on any one flight at one-in-a-million.

Nevertheless, most people still sit on the edge of their seats until landing.

The federal regulators who oversee the safety of our nuclear power plants (NRC), state the odds of a severe core-melt accident (like Chernobyl) at Trojan at one-in-200!

No one can force you to climb on board an airplane, but you can be forced by others to "take a ride" with Trojan. Even when you know the odds for disaster are 5,000 times greater!

Vote YES on 6.
Safety First!

Authorized and Paid for by the Do It Yourself Committee.
1841 N.W. 23rd Ave., Portland, OR 97210 (503) 221-3080