Obituaries

Doris M. Ball

Funeral services were held for Doris M. Ball on Friday, November 6, 1992, at All Saints Episcopal Church in Heppner. Burial followed the service at the Heppner Masonic Cemetery.

Mrs. Ball, 89, of Heppner, died Tuesday, Nov. 3, 1992 at Pioneer Memorial Hospital in Heppner.

She was born Jan. 23, 1903 at Watertown, S.D. to William P. and Harriet Kimball Mahoney. The family moved to Heppner on St. Patrick's day, 1917. She graduated from Heppner High School and attended Oregon State College at Corvallis.

On Sept. 30, 1923, she married Arch C. Ball at Heppner. They lived in Seattle, WA. for a short time then returned to Morrow County where they farmed on Rhea Creek. After selling the ranch they bought the Ruggs Store which they operated until retirement and then moved to Heppner.

Mrs. Ball was a member of All Saints Episcopal Church, Rhea Creek Grange and Eastern Star.

She enjoyed her family and home and in her later years, spending time at the family cabin at Blake's Ranch. Mrs. Ball enjoyed tating and playing the piano.

Survivors include daughters, Harriet Hall of Heppner, Eileen Steiger of Portland, Beth Hughes of Stanfield and Nancy Ekstrom of Lone; a son Archie of Heppner; a sister Patricia Beaver of Palm Springs, CA.; 16 grandchildren and 28 great grandchildren. Her husband died earlier as did a son Robert, daughter Laurel Van Marter, brothers Ken and Phil Mahoney and sisters Vera Mahoney and Kathleen Mather.

Memorial contributions may be made to the All Saints Episcopal church, PO Box 246, Heppner, OR 97836 or the Pioneer Memorial Nursing Home, PO Box 9, Heppner 97836.

Sweeney Mortuary, Heppner, was in charge of arrangements.

Alice A. Smith

Alice A. Smith, 86, a longtime Irrigon resident, died Wednesday, Nov. 4, 1992 at Good Samaritan Center in Hermiston.

Graveside services were held at the Hermiston Cemetery on Monday, Nov. 9, 1992.

Mrs. Smith was born Sept. 27, 1906 at East Grossman in Wallowa County to Vesper and Maude Taylor Henderson.

She moved to Irrigon in 1940. She had taught school in Central Oregon, Wallowa County, Umatilla and Riddle.

Survivors include a stepson, Fred Smith of Rockville, Md., daughters Shirley Sands, Sharlene Hughes and Shaaron Hughs, all of Hermiston; brothers, Vernon Henderson of Umatilla and James Henderson of Wallowa; sisters Grace Horton and Lois Henderson, both of Wallowa, Emma Horton and Leila Leitch, both of Hermiston; 13 grandchildren, 20 great grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren. Her first husband Ray Chenowith, died in 1926 and her second husband Melvin Smith died in 1958.

Burns Mortuary in Hermiston was in charge of arrangements.

Emma Drake

Funeral services for Emma C. Drake was held Monday Nov. 9, 1992 at Heppner United Methodist Church. Concluding service and burial was at the Heppner Masonic Cemetery.

Mrs. Drake, 99, Heppner, died Wednesday, Nov. 4, 1992 at Pioneer Memorial Nursing Home in Heppner.

She was born Sept. 27, 1893, in Mehama, to Addison and Effie Reed Wright. She was raised and attended schools in the Salem area.

She was married to Raymond K. Drake on Nov. 25, 1914, at Salem. They came by train to lone to farm in the Hail Ridge area, where they lived for many years. Then they moved to Sand Hollow.

Mrs. Drake was a charter member of Jason Lee Methodist church, Salem and transferred her membership to Heppner United Methodist in 1971. She was active in Home Extension, Oregon State University Service. She was among the first members when the group organized.

She also was a Rhea Creek Grange member for more than 40 years. Later she joined the Lexington Grange. She was an avid gardener and enjoyed her large yard of flowers. She was pleased to receive the garden club's yard of the month award in her later years.

She also enjoyed knitting, crewel embroidery and many crafts. She liked to cook for her large family and also fishing in local streams and lakes with friends and relatives.

Survivors include sons, Raymond of Philomath, Donald of Stockton, CA and Claude of Athol, Idaho; a daughter Claudine Warren, Heppner; 22 grandchildren; 41 great-grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren.

Ulcer Drug Interacts With Other Medicines

Sulcralfate (Carafate) is a widely used ulcer medicine that reacts with stomach acid, following oral administration, to form a paste-like substance that binds with ulcer tissue in the stomach and small intestine. The binding of sulcralfate to ulcer tissue forms an insoluble complex that acts as a mechanical barrier between the ulcer and other substances. The complex protects the ulcer from the action of stomach acid, pepsin, and bile, allowing the ulcer to heal. In addition to promoting the healing of ulcers, sulcralfate has been used to protect the stomach from the corrosive effects of medicines such as aspirin and the oral antiinflammatory medicines.

One of the undesirable effects of sulcralfate is its potential interaction with several other medicines. The American Hospital Formulary Service indicates that sulcralfate has been shown to bind or interact with tetracycline, cimetidine, digoxin, phenytoin, theophylline, and ranitidine. According to a recent issue of Annals of Internal Medicine, sulcralfate also interacts with levothyroxine, a medicine used to treat hypothyroidism (a low thyroid hormone condition). These interactions can result in decreased oral absorption of the other medicines and a drop in medicine blood levels. In order to prevent such interactions, it has been suggested that sulcralfate tablets be taken two hours before or after the other medicines.

A Heavy Agenda

Now that the elections are over it is business as usual for most of us. All of us, that is, but those elected to various and sundry offices across the land. Bill Clinton has a heavy agenda ahead and appears to have jumped right into it, with much gusto. Wes Cooley and Gordon Smith were barely able to catch their breaths before finding themselves in the midst of their heavy agendas.

The new Morrow County Court has a heavy agenda too. The prevailing record of making us less divided than six years ago will take on some new emphasis in the next six. But the heaviest agenda for the next term will be Home Rule.

Home Rule is very simple: some form of government that's different from that provided by state law. Just how different is up to the local folks. Home Rule is not an automatic thing, it depends on just exactly how the local proposed change is structured.

Usually that involves two things—first, having the county court appoint a number of county officials rather than have the voters elect them. That usually includes the clerk, treasurer, assessor, surveyor and sometimes the sheriff. The idea is that if the county court appoints those people, then they will be people who are competent in their jobs rather than just politically popular. There's also the idea that some of those departments can be consolidated and operated more efficiently.

Umatilla County just adopted a Home Rule charter that allows their county commission to appoint their clerk, treasurer, assessor and surveyor. Their sheriff will continue to be elected.

The second major change usually sought by a Home Rule charter is change in the county court itself. Presently, the county is governed by two commissioners and a county judge. Besides being the chairman of the county court, the judge also has juvenile court jurisdiction. All three are paid officials, the commissioners half-time at $19,000 and the judge full-time at $38,000.

Our new county commissioner proposes to change that to a five-member commission elected from zones around the county. That's just the kind of plan Gilliam County turned down last week and a mighty heavy agenda.

The idea of a Home Rule charter with one or more of these changes in the form of government has been kicking around for a lot of years. Actually the legislation that allows Home Rule charters was adopted in 1958 and Umatilla County becomes only the ninth county to take advantage of the flexibility it affords.

As I see it, Home Rule charters make a lot of good sense. For years I've been cool to the idea, if not actually opposed. Now, however, it seems the time has come. Consolidation of the various county departments under a single administrative head who answers to a five-member policy board appears to be an efficient, responsive way to run county government.

The five commissioner idea seems to mirror the five commissioners for the Port of Morrow. A plan which provides every community representation and the county-wide port district a well balanced yet responsive governing body. That commission should also zone their directors to assure that same broad representation in the future.

The school board already has a form of zoned representation with five of seven board members elected from the former school districts. That system works so well it should be the model for both the port and the county.

As the county grows and the population continues to shift, it would be wise to build in to school, port and county government some assurance that a bare majority of voters will not be able to entirely deprive one area of the county of representation on any one of these important governing bodies. Zoning will make a lot of sense as the county's population continues to shift.

Our new county commissioner is on the right track with this Home Rule thing and deserve our support.
