Antacids: Effective and Fast Acting Medicines

According to comments by Dr. Hugo Gallo-Torres in a recent issue of Pharmacy Times, antacids are fast acting and should bring relief in a matter of minutes. Several gastrointestinal problems respond favorably to antacid medicines. These conditions include:

Peptic Ulcer Disease: About 10 percent of all Americans develop an ulcer or sore in the stomach or small intestine at some point in their lives. Antacids are used along with other medicines such as the H2 antagonists to neutralize acid, allowing ulcers to heal.

Heartburn: The burning sensation caused by stomach acid and partially digested food that backs up into the lower end of the esophagus often is relieved with antacids.

Indigestion (sour stomach): An upset stomach or acid indigestion may mean that the lining of the stomach is inflamed due to excess acid secretion. Antacids and other medicines may provide relief.

Dr. Gallo-Torres suggests that if there is no immediate relief of indigestion or heartburn, some other condition may be present that requires the attention of a physician. Antacids can interact with certain medicines and vitamin/mineral preparations. Antacid side effects include diarrhea (magnesium-containing antacids) and constipation (aluminum-containing antacids).

Brown planned, organized and then worked the details for a series of events celebrating the 75th year that Boardman has called itself a city. The celebration included a founder's day ball in February, the mayor's golf tournament in March, the city's first Cinco de Mayo celebration in May, the town on wheels party in July, pioneer days with an Indian and mountain-man rendezvous in August and greatly expanded Christmas tree lighting programs in both 1991 and 1992.

In presenting the award, Jack Strege, chairman of the selection committee, said that Brown's perseverance and drive were instrumental. "Without her, 1992 simply would not have happened," he said. Brown thanked the chamber and all the volunteers who played a role in the year-long festivities. "It was you," she said, "who made it all happen."

Port of Morrow manager Gary Neal and Dr. Robert Boss were also nominated for the award. Neal raised $27,000 for the purchase of a travel bus for Riverside High School students and Boss was instrumental in organizing the Cinco de Mayo celebration.

Boss was installed as the new Chamber president and Boardman Mayor Bill Brown as vice president. Outgoing president Ed Glenn introduced a number of members who have been important to what he called a "banner" year for the chamber. Glenn now serves as chairman of the board.

Ione Middle School beats Echo

The Ione Middle School Cardinals traveled to Echo for their first game Thursday, Dec. 17 and beat the Cougars 34-18.

Ione punished Echo with a tough man-to-man defense. Echo found themselves down by 10 at the end of the first quarter.

Echo rebounded in the second and third period but the Ione bench was too much. The bench led by Marc Orem, Randy Scott and Joe Bacon, helped the starters beat Echo. Kelly Morgan led all scorers with 11 points followed by Steve Allen's nine. Luke Swanson and Jory Crowell added some good passes for the young Cardinal team.

To the Citizens of Heppner

You may be wondering why the rather large ad appeared in last week's paper asking for your opinion of my running for mayor. To follow is a story of why this happened and why it's costing me so much to retract that ad.

On December 11th, 1992 I was part of a conspiracy to get Jack Greene of Lake Oswego, Oregon on his 40th Birthday. I knew this was dangerous because Jack is a notoriously sore loser—as the ad in the Heppner Gazette proves.

This is what I did to Jack Greene: I simply took him out to breakfast on said morning and due to the fact that he gulped his food down had to side track him and ask to go see his one year old daughter at home. While I was making this diversionary action, my cohorts trashed his desk and did one other thing that made Mr. Greene (a VERY tidy person) so mad that he placed last week's ad. Jack was especially bitter because he was so sure that I had only trashed his office and made him pay for breakfast, he wished me well on my trip back to Eastern Oregon.

The crowning blow for Mr. Greene was that my cohorts attached a few pounds of chicken manure above the catalytic converter in his pick-up. He went around for quite awhile fuming over the lovely fragrance emanating from his vehicle (even now it retains some aroma). When his wife told him where to look and who the mastermind of this deed was, he went ballistic (his wife is in trouble too).

Even though his ad was an embarrassment to me and my family, I still feel this was a great way for a friend to remember his 40th Birthday. And it made him famous in some circles!

My sincere apologies to the Heppner Community for my friend's skulduggery. But what can you expect from someone from "The Valley"—especially "Lake Ego."

Happy New Year to a great town!

Kent Goodyear

P.S. My wife says I have to use my Christmas Lighting Award money to help pay for this ad.
