

Ione youth group assists homeless

Melissa McElligott and Mac Lovett donate gloves to Sr. Maria Francis

By Anne Morter

The Ione Youth Group made a pre-Christmas service trip to the Burnside area of Portland December 21 and 22.

The group volunteered their services to several of the agencies in the area and were given tasks ranging from cleaning to serving food to wrapping Christmas presents for homeless children.

Instead of preparing a meal for the homeless as they have done in the past, the group channeled their funds into providing gloves for needy people. Morrow County Grain Growers sold the youth group 85 pairs of gloves at their cost, which the students donated to Outreach Ministries for distribution. Youth group coordinator, Jeri McElligott, said that the gloves were donated on Monday, and on Tuesday, she was pleased to see a man wearing a pair at Blanchet House.

The four adult leaders split the group into four smaller groups and all of the groups rotated through five different agencies over the two days. At Outreach Ministries, they cleaned apartments and did office work. Outreach Ministries is an organization that becomes "family" for homeless people. They find apartments, clean those apartments and handle the finances of 50-60 people who might not be able to do so on their own.

Recovery Inn, a night shelter for men (formerly Baloney Joes) was another stop. There the volunteers sorted clothes, folded blankets, washed walls and cleaned the sleeping room.

At the Sisters of the Road Cafe, the group waited tables, bused tables and helped in the kitchen. This cafe serves homeless people a meal for $1.25 and is authorized to accept food stamps. People without money are allowed to work for their meals.

Blanchet House is a soup kitchen, operated by the Catholic Church, which serves breakfast and lunch 365 days a year. Group members helped serve soup at Blanchet. The Monday group dished out 440 bowls of soup during their shift.

At the Greenhouse Youth Shelter, a primary task was wrapping Christmas presents for homeless children. Greenhouse does not provide overnight accommodations for youth but instead offers schooling, counseling and sporting activities from 3-9 p.m. daily.

McElligott mentioned that it was interesting being on Burnside so close to Christmas because the donations of food, clothing, toys, money and merchandise from large retailers were pouring in. "We were constantly interrupted by people coming in to make a donation," she said.

The group stayed overnight at the First Congregational Church in downtown Portland, with arrangements made through the Ione United Church of Christ. Bill Rietmann transported students to and from the project.

The students participating in this service trip were: Ryan Halvorsen, Justin Miller, Michelle Kandle, Rob Van't Ent, Bridget McElligott, Jessie Stefani, Lynde Minster, Crystal Minster, Erika Bergstrom, Mac Lovett, Fatma Juma, Jared Ashbeck, Jake Bacon, Kim Bedortha and Melissa McElligott. For Halvorsen, Miller and Melissa McElligott, it was their third service trip. Adult leaders were Cathy Halvorsen, Tom Bedortha, Jeri McElligott and Janet McElligott.

Gun club has shoot

Seventeen trapshooters braved the cold to open the 1993 season at the gun club last Sunday. Once again MCGC has teamed up with the Walla Walla gun club to participate in the Spokesman Review Telephonic Shoot.

MCGC records each shooter's score from the 16 yard line and from a handicap distance. At the end of the season trophies will be awarded for the highest average of each class.

Jay Coil shot the highest 16 yard average with a score of 23 out of 25. Loren Woodside, Sheron Woodside, and Curt Day tied for second with 22 out of 25. In the handicap event Jay Coil took another first with a perfect 25 of 25. Harvey Childers and Loren Woodside tied for second with a score of 22 out of 25.

Harvey Childers was elected to the board of MCGC. He joins Jeff Cutsforth, president, Brian Thompson, vice president, Kellwayne Haguewood secretary-treasurer, and Roger Mortimore associate director.

The gun club will open at noon, Sunday, Jan. 17.

IMS Girls beat Cougars

By Kara Miller

Ione Middle School girls hosted the Echo Cougars on January 7 and beat the Cougars 27-19.

Echo jumped out to an early lead and led the first half. Ione came out relaxed from the half and executed with better ball control to pace themselves to take the win in the third and fourth quarter.

Suzy Heideman led the team in rebounds and was high scorer with eight points. Kara Miller had three assists.

Ione will travel to Condon to play the Devils on Thursday, January 14.

1 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to send a sincere thank you to all our friends and neighbors for their cards and expressions of sympathy at the time of our recent bereavement. We are truly grateful.

The family of Alta Cutsforth 1-13-1p

We would like to thank everyone once again for all their help and concern while George was in the hospital and recovering at home. We truly appreciate all of you.

The Waterlands 1-13-1c

A big, belated thank you to all the individuals and businesses who are donating time, money, effort, counter space or products for our fundraising for a swimming pool in Heppner.

To name you all would be impossible, but everything is well appreciated including bake sales, donations in memory of loved ones, raffle tickets, receipt collecting, taking admissions at the county fair gate, donation jars, spaghetti dinner, pool calcuttas and auctions. Special thanks to Mary benge for her support, to Dennis D. Doherty for his help and to the Heppner Gazette-Times for their publicity.

Our current fund raiser is selling laser-printed veneer bricks and we want to mention that Jo Pettyjohn personally purchased the very first brick which will state "Howard and Jo Pettyjohn".

Please watch the Gazette for further information about our swimming pool. Much more is coming up and community support is much appreciated and needed.

Off the Wall

By Meryn Robinson

Does it seem like it's been winter forever—a time to keep home fires stoked and the snow boots handy? But no one dares to grumble too loudly because of the freeze-dried moisture. However, we are fortunate compared with areas that are buried in snow and that our white stuff hasn't been whirled into impassable drifts.

Though the majority of people aren't stuck at home anymore when the weather and roads get risky, it still tends to generate a "cabin fever" mentality after the December bustle before Christmas.

In case you're not a snowmobiler there are always soap operas or movies. So I won't dwell on non-entertaining things like income tax preparation, neglected craft projects, cleaning out drawers, rearranging closets or trying new recipes.

Livestock producers get plenty of outdoor exercise as the weather whets animal appetites. Needless to say, there are usually some newborns that need help when born into a cold cruel atmosphere. Even our stock dog prefers a cozy indoor rug instead of crisp straw in the barn. When the thermometer is stuck on zero.

It's still a far cry from when there wasn't an abundance of four wheel drive vehicles and country roads often became bottomless. It was during the winter of 1949-50 that just a few miles from town it seemed like we were cut off from the rest of the world. For nearly three months there was nothing but snow, drifts and zero temperatures.

Cut off from Saturday night dances and get-togethers seemed like cruel and unusual punishment to me. It was only when our neighbors, the Al Fetches took pity on us that we socialized for an evening of card playing and homemade ice cream, thanks to their small jeep.

Come February, we were still stuck in the "hollow" with no relief in sight. The herd instinct caused me to devise a plan that would get us to the "can't miss" Elks annual. We rode horseback to town leaving our hired man to fend with overnight chores.

No, we didn't stomp into the dance wearing cowboy boots. A suit and a long formal had been carefully packed and tied behind saddles. Thanks to accommodations from friends we reveled in the all-night festivities.

It must have been a very "hot" party for as we prepared to ride back the next day, a sudden thaw hit. In the aftermath, roads and the countryside were sliced with ditches.

Even though our hill going to town now resembles a toboggan run, no more chaining up to become hopelessly mired. Front wheel drive makes an amazing difference. And just think of all the "educational" things one can learn with more time to watch television. For instance, I recently learned that the "grunge" look is in style. As explained, it means putting on anything that doesn't really go together. Here I've been in style for some time and didn't know it. It's gratifying when one can be a fashion setter.

Lady Cards take easy win

By Anne Morter

The Ione Lady Cardinals had two easy wins last weekend as they started league play. They start the league season with a 2-0 record and move their season record to 5-3.

On Friday, Jan. 8, the Lady Cards traveled to Helix where they pounced on the Grizzlies for an easy 53-29 win. It was never close as Ione led 16-5 at the end of one and 33-11 at the half.

Melissa McElligott led all scorers with 13 points followed by Jamie Lovett with 12 and April Taylor with nine. The Cards controlled the boards 46-20, led by Tanja Anderson and Lovett, who both had nine rebounds. McElligott paced the team with five steals and four assists.

The Lady Cards hit 23 of 67 for 34 percent from the floor. At the line, they made six of 13 for 46 percent. Helix shot just 20 of 55 for 20 percent from the floor and seven of 19 for 37 from the line.

"We were rusty after three weeks off," said coach Dana Heideman, noting that practices over the vacation had been hampered by weather and illness.

"With a few more games, we'll be back where we left off," he commented.
