

Library expands youth offerings

To mark National Library Week, April 17 to 24 the Heppner branch of Oregon Trail Library is opening two new collections of materials: young adult fiction and children's videocassettes.

"Several patrons have noted a need for reading materials for young people in grades seven through 12," said Wendell Buck, Oregon Trail Library District.

The library is beginning to address that need with its new young adult fiction collection, he said. The new books touch on themes that today's teens are thinking about, from sports to teen parenthood, from racism and drug abuse to first love and family relationships. Here are a few examples from the new collection:

"The Brave" by Robert Lipsyte. At 17, Sonny Bear is a heavyweight boxer. He feels the monster of anger; he is an outsider both on and off his own reservation. His uncle Jake says the monster is really the dignified Hawk spirit and that Sonny must learn to control it. But Sonny runs away to the dope wars of Times Square. There he meets Alfred Brooks, a former Harlem boxer, now a cop. Brooks tries to do for Sonny what his own trainer did for him: give him faith in himself and help him discover his own strengths.

"The Day that Elvis Came to Town" by Jan Marino. Aunt April May warns her that "Elvis what's his name isn't going to remember her. She's nothing but a liar." But still Wanda believes that Mercedes, the glamorous jazz singer who says she went to high school with Elvis Presley, can make her dream of meeting The King come true. Set in the South in the early sixties, this richly told novel will transport readers to a time and place they'll never forget.

"Crosses" by Shelley Stoehr. Meeting Katie at Babylon High School is one of the best things that has ever happened to Nancy. By hanging out with the punks, Nancy can finally shed her goody goody image. She at last has someone who accepts her as she is, something her parents can't seem to do even when they're sober. But even with Katie's friendship, Nancy still can't keep her life under control. Things just keep getting worse, and no amount of drugs or self mutilation seems to help.

The new children's video collection has live action and animated versions of some of the great classics of children's literature, including tales by the Brothers Grimm, Hans Christian Andersen, and Rudyard Kipling, as well as stories from folk traditions around the world. Ten of the new videos are from the award winning Rabbit Ears series. Here are some examples:

"Finn McCool" The comic genius of Catherine O'Hara and the spirited traditional Celtic music of the Boys of the Lough beautifully combine to tell the sheer nonsensical fun of the story.

"Owl TV" This program contains a segment on why scientists tag polar bears in the arctic, an interview with a friendly lemur, and an explanation of how the human heart works.

In addition to the two new collections, the library has about 40 new non-fiction books for children including several from the popular Eyewitness series. "It's very exciting to see the steady stream of new materials begin to come into the library. Over the next several months I expect to see more and more new books, videos and sound recordings for all ages and interests." Buck said.

Local students win writing contest

Several local students have been announced winners of a writing contest sponsored by the Trail Blazers, AVIA, Bank of America and the Oregonian.

Local regional winners are Andrew Rietmann, Adam McCabe, Mark McElligott and Felicity Warren, all Lone Elementary; Lyndee Minster, Tami Nolan, Mike Green and Erika Bergstrom, Lone High School and Scott VanWinkle, Heppner Elementary.

This year's essay theme was "The Year 2000..." More than 41,000 students first grade through 12th grade, accepted the challenge to enter the "Write-On" competition. The incentive offered, according to Wally Scales, Blazers vice-president of special events who oversees the BASIC program, was the chance to earn a trip to Portland plus four tickets to watch the Trail Blazers host the San Antonio Spurs at the Memorial Coliseum on April 18. Grand prize winners also received AVIA athletic shoes, an autographed Trail Blazers basketball and a pre-game reception with Blazers all-star guard and BASIC chairman Clyde Drexler. Participating schools selected the best entries at each grade level for their facility and forwarded those entries to the appropriate Education Service District. Regional winners, one per grade level, were determined by each ESD. Winning regional essays were then evaluated by the Portland Council International Reading Association, who selected the top overall entries for each grade level.

St. Patrick's Senior Center Bulletin Board

One hundred nine people were present for the senior dinner April 14, including seven guests. Nine dinners were taken out. Clayton Ayers won the meal ticket, Darrell Vinson the door prize and Velma Parker of Pasco, WA, the guest gift. Members of the Mormon Church served. The Senior Center Board met following dinner.

The menu for the birthday dinner April 28 will be chicken pie with biscuits, broccoli, waldorf salad, cake and ice cream. Members of the Seventh Day Adventist and Nazarene Churches will serve.

Thursday morning the Focus group met with Molly Rhea. There were only two other members present so the meeting was brief. Plans are going forward for the Health Fair to be held April 29 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Senior Center.

Friday two tables of pinocle were in play, with those present having an enjoyable afternoon.

Friday evening Bart Taylor and crew stripped and rewaxed the dining room and kitchen floor. Spring cleaning continues.

Sunday morning the bus loaded with seniors went to Hood River for the blossom festival. They had a good time even though the apple trees were not yet in bloom. They reported that the scenery was beautiful.

The Sunday evening movie 'Green Fried Tomatoes' was well attended.

Monday, April 19, a bus load of seniors went to Irrigon for lunch.

Saturday, April 24, the bus will go to Hardman for dinner. Call or stop by the senior office to sign up.

There will be a 55 Alive driving course held at the Senior Center May 3 and 4. Call Carol Mitchell or the senior office for more information.

May 12 Marilyn Jio (In Service) will hold a 45 minute question and answer session of information on the Hanford Health effects. The meeting will begin at 11:30 a.m. For more information call 1-800-248-4446.

Dates to remember: Monday, Bible study 10:30-11:30 a.m., quilting 1 p.m., knitting, spinning 7 p.m.; Tues. and Thurs., exercise, 10 a.m.; Wednesday, dinner noon; Friday, cards 2:30 p.m. Sunday evening, movie, time to be announced.

The Housing Authority group will meet on April 25 at 7 p.m.
