Becket and Koffler attend business week

More than 250 high school sophomores and juniors, including Tony Becket and Rick Koffler, took a step into the business world during the 13th annual Oregon Business Week July 15-18 at Linfield College. Themes for the program included "Private Enterprise: Its Role in the U.S. Economic System", "Hiring For Success", "Doing Business in a Competitive World", "Management and Labor Relations" and "Productivity and Profits". Oregon Business Week, sponsored by the Associated Oregon Industries Foundation in Salem, is designed to give high school sophomores and juniors the inside story of business operations within the free enterprise system. Oregon high school students are gaining a better understanding of the business world through the program, according to Barbara

Carey, vice president of the AOI Foundation. Students are tested before and after the program and test scores show marked improvement, with 70 to 90 percent of the students answering the questions correctly, she said. Prior to the program, those answering the questions correctly ranged from 30 to 70 percent. During the week, groups of students run their own computer-simulated businesses, facing many of the same decisions as executives in the real business world, Carey said. Student "companies" are assisted by experienced business people, sharing their knowledge and expertise, and addressing the major issues of private enterprise in candid, informal discussion. In addition to working within their own "companies" and interacting with guest speakers, students also participated in a number of field trips. This year, those included A-dec, Inc., Carlton Nurseries, McMinnville News-Register, Hazelwood Farms Bakery, Cascade Steel Rolling Mills, Inc., Hewlett-Packard, McDaniel Seed, Jake's Deli, Freelin-Wade and Climax Portable Machine Tools, Inc. The primary objective of Oregon Business Week is to help high school students and teachers better understand the American economic system and the role of business, said a Linfield news release.

Wheatland Pomona meets for memorial

Wheatland Pomona Grange met at the Hardman Community Center on Sunday July 18, for their regular picnic and memorial service. Due to the uncertain weather conditions the group was pleased to be able to use the facilities of the hall. The memorial had been planned for Anson Wright Park.

A bountiful potluck dinner was enjoyed, after which the yearly memorial was held. A poem, "Cathedral Trees" was read. Sacred violin music was played by Frances Smouse while a balloon with the word "Memorial to Grangers", written on it was let go over the area. The closing prayer was given by Roger Scharen. Delpha Jones was acting chaplain in the absence of Pomona Chaplain Eulenna Vaughn of the Greenfield Grange. Overseer Dot Halvorsen acted as master in the absence of Master Barton Clark.

Those remembered were past state master Morton Wolverton; Spray departed members Ella Munjar, Clara Jenkins and Claude Britt; Greenfield member Marylee Marlow and Willows members Bob Rietmann and Clea Walters.

Delanne Ferguson of the Forest Service spoke to the group of the long-range plan for the Forest Service and other federal agencies working together for the preservation and clean up of the forests streams, and problems such as the spotted owl and fish.

The roll call of the granges was

Spray-four; Lexington-10; Willows-eight and Greenfield-zero.

The next meeting will be October 23 at Greenfield Grange at 10 a.m. with an election of officers for a two year period.

New Problems With Treating Tuberculosis

About a year ago officials at the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) reported a dramatic increase in the number of newly reported cases of tuberculosis (TB) in the United States. About 8 million people worldwide are now infected with Mycobacterium tuberculosis, the bacteria that causes TB. Almost 3 million people die each year from this disease. A major concern of public health officials is the recent outbreak of infections that are resistant to standard TB medicines. A 1991 New York City survey indicated that one-third of all cases were resistant to one of the currently available TB medicines. Almost 20 percent were resistant to isoniazid and rifampin, two of the most effective TB medicines. In addition, many patients are becoming reinfected because drug treatments have not lasted long enough. A third problem has been an increase in the number of cases of TB that complicate the treatment of patients with AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome).

An approach to the continuing problem of drug resistance is to use five to six drugs in the patient until lab tests show which drugs have the most promise. Some physicians then recommend a minimum of three drugs given over a period of two years. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is encouraging manufacturers to develop new drugs for TB by offering to speed up the approval of such medicines.

Barratts donate painting to WCCC

Jim Barratt with Charles Russell painting

Heppner native Jim Barratt of Corvallis and his wife Dorothea have donated a Charlie Russell western painting to the Willow Creek Golf Club's annual couples' tournament to be held August 7 and 8. The painting has been in the Barratt family for over 60 years. The painting is a copy of the original artwork painted in 1908 by the country's top cowboy artist. It has been appraised at $375 by two different art experts, said Barratt.

Last year the Barratts donated an orange and black OSU golf bag with the proceeds going toward the swimming pool. Nearly $400 was realized through the raffle. The Barratts say they hope that the painting will raise more than $1,000 for the golf course, in a similar raffle.

The Barratts plan to make an annual donation benefitting Heppner and/or Morrow County.
